Mobile missile money to be sought

(c) New York Times

Washington — Defense Secretary Harold Brown has approved full-scale development funds for a new mobile missile system that could lead to the largest and most costly missile program ever undertaken by the United States.

Brown's decision to ask Congress for $245 million in development money in the budget for the fiscal year 1979 is expected to touch off a growing debate on the controversial weapons program designed to replace the Minuteman, now the mainstay of the U.S. arsenal of land-based strategic missiles.

Defense Department officials make it plain that the Carter administration has yet to make a decision on the production and deployment of the sophisticated new missile which is designed so that it can be launched from various points along an underground tunnel 10 to 12 miles long. Nonetheless, Brown's move advances the development of a system that could cost as much as $35 billion or $40 billion.

Only in recent months — as the Carter administration prepares its new defense budget — has the issue of the new missile, called M-X or "missile experimental," began to stir major interest in the Capitol.

"The decision whether to acquire the M-X missile will be the single most important weapon-system decision faced by the Carter administration," said a report last month by the Brookings Institution.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a member of the Senate Armed Forces Committee, said: "People haven't focused on the M-X yet, but they will soon enough. There's going to be a major debate on this."

The Air Force says the mobile missile is necessary because the silos in which Minuteman missiles are buried will become vulnerable to Soviet attack by the mid-1980s. Although the project is still in its planning stages, the new mobile missle will probably occupy a trench 10 to 12 miles long and five feet underground. It will be movable — thereby avoiding Soviet targeting — more accurate and far more powerful than any strategic weapon now employed by the United States.

"Unless we do something, Minuteman survivability is going down," Lt. Gen. Alton D. Slay, the Air Force deputy chief of staff for research and development, said recently. "M-X survivability will push that back up. Effectiveness is going to go down. M-X will push that back up."

It is the Air Force point of view that the emergence of new types of Soviet multiple-warhead intercontinental ballistic missiles will endanger the effectiveness of American land-based strategic systems over the next decade and lead to an imbalance of power.

U.S. defense strategy is based on the "triad concept" of land-based intercontinental missiles, submarine-launched missiles and bombers. Each leg of the triad is designed to sustain a Soviet attack and retain the capacity to retaliate with sufficient force. The Air Force says, in effect, that one key leg of the triad would become vulnerable unless the United States developed and deployed the M-X system.

Critics say the cost of the M-X missile is enormous, and it is unnecessary. Although the program remains shrouded in some secrecy, the cost of building a trench for the weapon has been estimated as high as $5 million a mile. The cost of the total program, with about 300 missiles, is estimated at $35 billion or $40 billion.

Critics — in the Pentagon, on Capitol Hill and in various defense "think tanks" — also argue that development and deployment of the missile will upset the military balance between the Soviet Union and the United States and thwart progress in strategic arms negotiations because of difficulties in verifying how many mobile missiles a nation has, especially if the missiles are concealed.

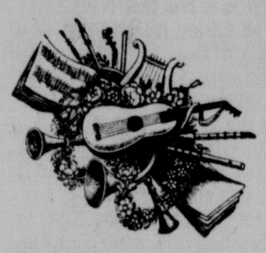

Critics say deployment of the new missile would give the United States a major advantage over the Soviet Union because the bulk of Soviet missiles, perhaps 75%, are land-based, and therefore will become increasingly vulnerable. On the other hand, only about 25% of the warheads in the American strategic force are based on land, with the rest aboard submarines or bombers.

In threatening the majority of Soviet land-based missiles with the M-X, congressional critics argue, the United States creates a "hair trigger" situation in which the Soviet Union may in a crisis fire the bulk of its intercontinental ballistic missiles out of fear of losing them.

Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, who has conducted hearings on the M-X, said recently: "The M-X as it is designed would, like the Soviets' own ICBM buildup, lock both sides into a new, much more dangerous and frightfully expensive arms race, an ICBM arms race, in which a minority of either side's ICBM force could endanger most of the ICBMs of their adversary."

Auto Workers reject AFL-CIO ties

Detroit (UPI) — Top officials of the United Auto Workers voted late Wednesday against reaffiliation with the AFL-CIO at this time, citing majority opposition from rank-and-file union members who prefer the UAW independent.

The action came despite strong support for reaffiliation from Union President Douglas A. Fraser and other top officials.

Carter signs U.N. rights appeals

United Nations, N.Y. (AP) — President Carter, declaring that the U.S. commitment to human rights is genuine and not just a political posture, signed two U.N. covenants here Wednesday.

The covenants — one on civil and political rights and the other on economic, social and cultural rights — grew out of a desire and effort to make the principles in the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights legally binding.

Bronx wreckage strikes chord

New York (AP) — President Carter made a surprise visit to the South Bronx on Wednesday and saw for himself block after block of burned out buildings, a desolate wasteland reminiscent of European cities shattered by World War II bombs.

"Get a map of the whole area and show me what should be done," the President directed at one point, addressing Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Patricia Harris, who accompanied the party.

Bones of contention reappear

Washington (AP) — Meat processors could add finely ground bits of bone and odd scraps of meat to hot dogs, salami and other processed meat under a new proposal announced Wednesday by the Agriculture Department.

Last year, USDA gave interim approval for the use of what then was called "mechanically deboned meat." But it cancelled the approval and backed off plans to allow it permanently after a consumer group obtained a court order against the practice.

Speedy delivery gets go-ahead

Washington (UPI) — The Postal Service announced Wednesday that its Express Mail Service, used experimentally since 1970 to provide guaranteed same-day or next-day delivery in selected cities, will become permanent starting Sunday.

Student fees get support

By Nancy Hicks and Joe Hudson
Star Staff Writers

Student fees are needed to ensure that college life is more than classes, books and term papers.

That was the argument of most students, professors and professionals who testified Wednesday at a hearing on a proposal that all student fees, except those bound by contractual obligations, be abolished.

In afternoon and evening sessions a three-member task force, created by the University of Nebraska Board of Regents to examine the possibility of abolishing fees, heard testimony from about 30 persons.

Most argued that various organizations funded by the $66.50 fee (per full-time student) round out the educational experience and provide needed services at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Presently, each student is required to pay the fee, which helps finance the Nebraska Union, Daily Nebraskan newspaper, University Health Center, student government, recreation, plus other student organizations both large and small.

Several students said education is incomplete without involvement in organizations that teach the student to work within institutions and with other people.

To ask the student involved in such activities to foot the bill — which would have to be done if fees were abolished — "would put too much a (financial) burden on me, as a student who is involved," Jay Matskye said.

However, a few others testified that it is unfair to ask students to finance activities of organizations to which they don't belong.

Doug Wentz, representing the UNL Block and Bridle Club, said his organization has a budget of $75,000, yet draws no money from student fees.

Wentz and UNL crew coach Frank Sands urged organizations to strive toward financial self-sufficiency. Sands said the crew has done just that, with hard work by team members.

The task force was asked to examine the possibility of voluntary student fees. All who testified agreed that a voluntary plan would not generate enough money to fund activities anywhere near the present level.

Student Greg Wielege argued that because he gets little or no use out of any of the organizations funded by fees — including the student union and health center — he should not be required to pay student fees.

Another student, Matt King, suggested all fees by voluntary and that use of the union, health center be limited to those who chose to pay the fee.

The regents' proposal on perhaps eliminating fees was prompted in part by a $40,000 increase in suggested fees at UNL. The board instead reduced fees by $70,000, from about $200,000 to $130,000.

Hearing open to news media

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

The preliminary hearing Thursday for accused murderer Robert E. Williams will be opened to the news media, Lancaster County Judge Robert Camp ruled Wednesday.

Williams' attorneys, Tom Hagel and Richard Goos of the public defender's office, filed a motion Wednesday morning asking Judge Camp to bar the media from the courtroom, or at least limit what newsmen could print.

The public, however, would have been admitted under Hagel's motion.

Camp ruled that the attorneys had made "no positive showing" that closing the hearing to the press was the only alternative that would guarantee Williams a fair trial.

In arguing to close the hearing, Hagel said coverage of the case has already prejudiced Williams' right to a fair trial and that coverage of the hearing would damage it further.

Williams was arrested in Lincoln on Aug. 18 after a weeklong manhunt which led police across three states. He was charged with the murder of Patricia McGarry, 25, of 1400 N. 44th, and her neighbor, Catherine Brooks, also 25. He has also been charged with the rape of a Lincoln woman which occurred shortly after the two murders.

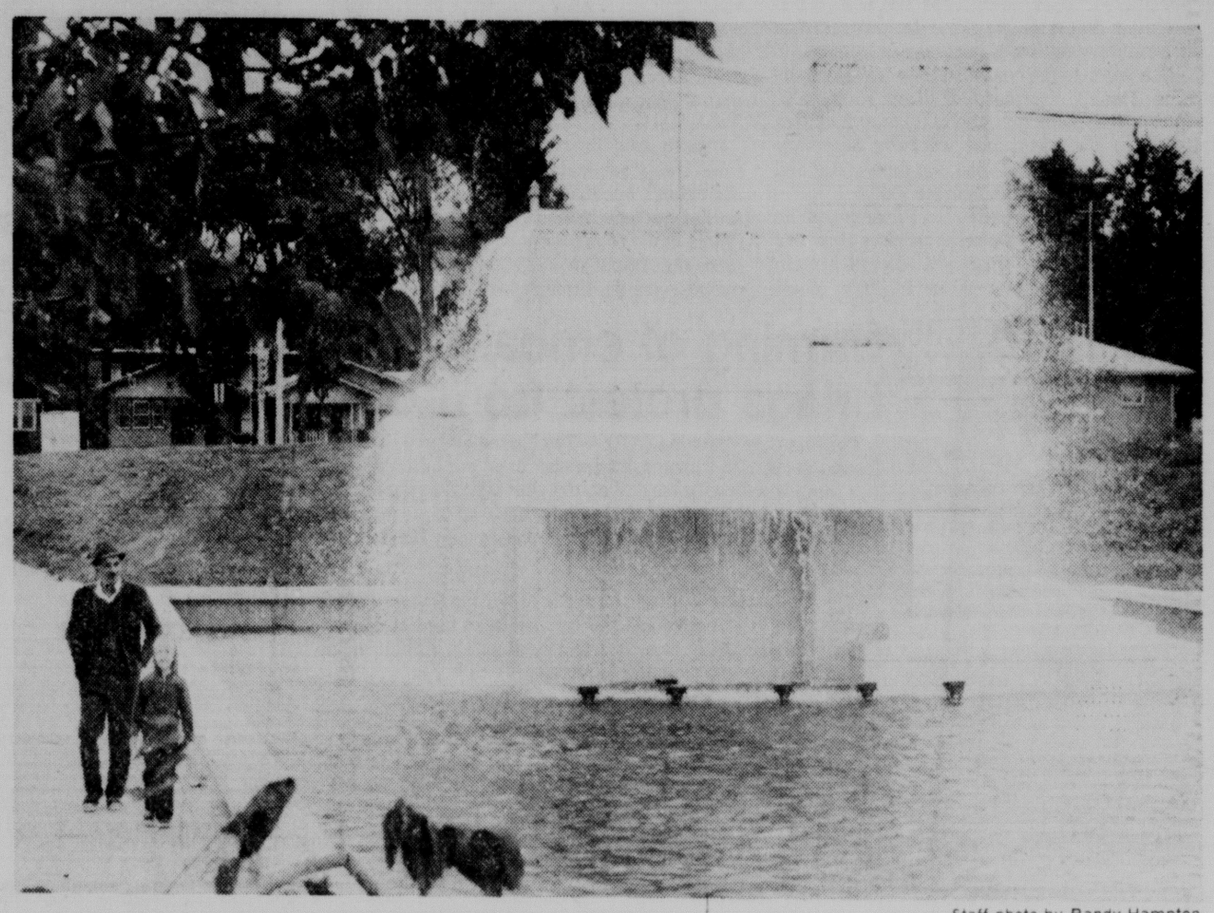

"They (the media) have put a higher value on selling newspapers than on a man's rights (to a fair trial)," Hagel said. "This is news to them, and they're going to make money on it."

Alan Peterson, attorney for The Lincoln Star and The Lincoln Journal, disputed Hagel's arguments, saying the media had reported the Williams case "with kid gloves."

Peterson also noted that there is no right to close a courtroom in Nebraska. State law and the state constitution require that court proceedings be open to the public, he said.

Earlier Wednesday, Camp had denied a motion from Hagel for a continuance in the case. Hagel also filed motions to exclude certain pictures taken by police at the scene of the alleged crime which may be introduced Thursday at the hearing.

Camp said those motions could not be properly addressed until the evidence was presented at the hearing.

Experts debate LT&T rates

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

The two star witnesses in the Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co. rate case squared off against one another Wednesday. Not unexpectedly, the pair didn't agree.

One, a Chicago investment banker, and the other, a college finance professor, told the Nebraska Public Service Commission what they thought the proper rate of return for LT&T should be.

The company is asking the commission to authorize a $6 million increase in telephone rates so the company will be able to realize a rate of return set by the PSC in 1974. The rate of return on equity now allowed by the PSC is 12.84%.

The professor, Dr. James Bicksler of Rutgers University in Newark, N.J., was hired by PSC staff to come up with an independent estimate of the fair rate of return on equity for LT&T. According to his calculations, the rate should range from 10.38% to 11.67%.

The banker, John C. James, vice president of Dean Witter & Co. in Chicago, was hired by LT&T. His firm handled the sale of a recent issue of 350,000 shares of LT&T common stock. According to his calculations, the rate of return on the common stock equity should be 15.3%.

Neither man would have testified at all during the marathon PSC hearing (which lasted for ten hours) if the attorneys arguing the case had had their way.

LT&T attorneys Allen and Bert Overcash wanted Dr. Bicksler's testimony thrown out. His testimony was "completely erroneous," they argued, and based on a theoretical mathematical formula not relevant to the world of "real" finance.

PSC attorney Patsy Mullenix wanted James' testimony thrown out. His testimony was unreliable, she argued, based on "judgments" and not proven formulas.

Commissioner Harold Simpson of Lincoln, who is acting in the role of judge during the hearings, reserved ruling on both motions.

Much of the testimony Wednesday involved complicated and detailed mathematical calculations and formulas used by Bicksler and James to arrive at their recommendations. Much of the rebuttal testimony centered on trying to disprove the other's formulas.

James contended LT&T needs a higher rate of return than recommended by Bicksler in order for the company to raise the money it needs to provide security to its bond holders.

Additionally, he said, the 15.3% rate on common stock equity "will result in the flexibility necessary to finance the company's capital needs without impairing its general credit and without diluting the equity interests of its present common stockholders."

If the commission approves a lower rate, James warned, it "will likely result in future sales of common stock at a price below book value and at a price that will constitute a partial confiscation of existing stockholders' property."

In LT&T's June offering of 350,000 shares, he noted that the utility was forced to sell common stock at a price below book value. Net proceeds were $28.49 a share instead of the book value of $32.66 a share, James said.

Dr. Bicksler argued, however, the framework he used to arrive at the lower rate of return "jives far more with reality than the framework Mr. James is using."

He urged the commission to reject James' data, since, Bicksler contended, "the burden of proof is on the utility when it comes in for a rate increase."

LT&T has not, he maintained "presented rigorous and systematic evidence regarding the fair regulatory rate of return."

A second LT&T witness, Dr. Rolf Tedefalk, associate professor of finance at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said he strongly disagrees with Bicksler's calculations.

"What you have in front of you," Dr. Tedefalk told the commission, "is a social scientist with his bag of tricks and a practitioner with his bag of tricks."

To Dr. Tedefalk, the practioner in this case is James, whom he thinks has the best arguments.

When Simpson pointed out the PSC may have problems determining whether to believe Bicksler or James, Tedefalk responded, "I hope you do something more than just saying they're equal in weight and cut it down the middle."

"If you pick the middle ground, then, frankly you don't need to have a commission," he said.

The PSC will resume the hearing at 10 a.m. Thursday.

USDA reorganization won't cut jobs

Washington (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland announced Wednesday he is reorganizing his department's 40 agencies into 26. None of the department's 82,000 full-time workers will lose their jobs.

Bergland said the streamlining would not save much money but would promote more efficient operation of programs including rural deveopment, expanded research, and investigation of abuses in activities ranging from food stamps to farm supports.

The secretary told a news conference the shakeup would also merge his department's office of communication into a unit headed by a politically appointed director of governmental and public affairs, but promised "we will not censor or filter the news."

He said the merger would provide for better coordination in handling the department's flood of announcements and press releases.

Bergland said there will be no dismissals or pay cuts because of the mergers. The shakeup will not, in itself, save much money although some "waste and duplication" in administrative services will be cut out.

Bergland said the primary goal of the reorganization, expected to be completed by January, is to "improve our efficiency in delivering services."

For example, he said, the plan will merge units handling investigations and audits into a single Office of Inspector General, making it easier for field auditors to call for full-scale investigations when they spot program irregularities.

Bergland named Thomas McBride, 48, a former Watergate task force member who directed prosecutions of many illegal campaign contribution cases, to head the new OIG.

In other shakeups:

— Research and extension agencies will be grouped into a new Food and Agricultural Science and Education Administration to pave the way for expanded research and nutrition activities.

— A small rural Development Service will be merged into the Farmers Home Administration which lends and grants billions of dollars for rural housing and community development. This will allow officials to coordinate careful planning instead of allowing aid to flow to "where the greatest political clout" is.

Bergland said congressional farm leaders received the plan favorably and will soon be asked to approve the rural development merger.

Many major agriculture agencies, including the Forest Service, Soil Conservation Service, Foreign Agricultural Service and Agircultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, were left untouched.

Canal defense rights questioned in Senate

Washington (AP) — The United States has the right to intervene militarily to defend the Panama Canal's neutrality under the new treaty governing the waterway, the State Department insisted Wednesday.

But a key member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said he still is not convinced, and department officials said they are seeking clarifications of any differing interpretations "from the highest levels that we can in Panama."

The latest squabble over exactly what military rights the treaty contains broke out Tuesday when Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., released a confidential cable from the embassy in Panama.

The cable reported a conversation with Panamanian treaty negotiator Carlos Lopez Guevara last week in which he warned American leaders not to use the term "intervention" to describe U.S. rights under the pact.

Dole told the committee Wednesday he believes the cable proves that the Panamanian government does not accept the U.S. interpretation that it has a right to decide on its own if a military action is necessary.

In a letter to the committee Wednesday morning, Deputy Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher said that the U.S. interpretation given to the panel last week by Secretary Cyrus R. Vance and other top diplomatic and military officials "is accurate."

"Under the new treaties . . . Panama and the United States have the responsibility to assure that the Panama Canal will always remain open, secure and accessible to ships of all nations. Accordingly, Panama and the United States each will have the right to take any appropriate measures to defend the canal against any threat to the regime of neutrality established in the treaty," Christopher said.

Neither the treaty nor the letter use the word "intervention," which Dole seeks to put in the treaty's defense section.

The agreement is actually two treaties. One covers a transition period to the year 2000, when full control of the 10-mile-wide Canal Zone would pass to the Panamanian republic. The second declares a permanent neutrality for the zone, enforced by a U.S.-Panama alliance.

Two-thirds of the Senate must approve the pact for it to take effect. A vote is scheduled next year.

Department spokesman Hodding Carter III said the administration stands "thoroughly and securely behind the interpretation we have offered Congress."

But Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, after reading Christopher's letter, unexpectedly commented, "The Senate is not going to ratify these treaties if crucial points are interpreted differently by the principal parties. This is a matter that must be clarified."

Church said he rejected the argument of some treaty advocates that the language is not important because of overwhelming U.S. military strength. Looking at department officials in the room, he said, "I reject the argument that might makes right. . . . I hope that message comes through loud and clear."

Irish Marxist slain in Dublin

Dublin, Ireland (AP) — Seamus Costello, an Irish extremist leader, was assassinated on a crowded Dublin street Wednesday by a gunman who fired two shotgun blasts into his face, then reloaded and fired again.

Police said the assassin escaped in a waiting car.

Costello, 38, married and the father of four, was the leader of the Marxist Irish Republican Socialist Party.

"The gunman talked to Costello before he shot him," one witness said.

The gunfire sent lunchtime shoppers ducking for cover on the street near the Dublin docks.

Costello died before an ambulance could get him to hospital, police said.

It was the second political assassination in Dublin in three weeks. Authorities said gunmen from the militant Provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army killed a trucking company official in a bar last week.

The killing raised fears of a rekindling of a bloody ideological feud between Costello's revolutionary IRSP and the IRA.

The Official wing of the IRA denied in a statement that it was behind the slaying.

Costello founded the IRSP in December 1974, after splitting with the IRA over its acceptance of a cease-fire with the British army in Northern Ireland.

Since the split, the factions clashed sporadically and authorities said there have been at least a dozen killings and numerous other attacks.

Costello was said to be impatient with the pace of both the political campaign waged by the Officials, and the militant approach of Provisionals, in attempting to drive the British out of Ulster and unite the province with the Irish Republic. Northern Ireland's Protestant majority militantly opposes such a union.

Sources said he survived at least two assassination attempts in the last two years and apparently had been a marked man since gunmen, believed to be IRSP members, killed Billy McMillen, the official IRA commander in Belfast in 1975.

Authorities estimate the IRSP has 500 activists in Ireland. Several have been arrested by police in the Irish Republic for bank and train robberies.

Burning of embassy car brings protest from U.S.

Panama City, Panama (AP) — The United States delivered a formal protest to Panama Wednesday over the burning of the U.S. ambassador's limousine at the University of Panama.

University students attending a rally opposed to the proposed Panama Canal treaties spotted the embassy car Tuesday and set it afire.

U.S. Ambassador William Jorden is in Washington for Senate hearings on the treaties and the car had been used by Deputy Chief of Mission Ray Gonzalez to attend an art exhibit at the Panama City campus of the university.

Embassy press spokesman Howard Lane said Gonzalez delivered the protest note personally to the Foreign Ministry.

"We are not releasing the statement and I cannot comment on its contents," Lane told reporters. Gonzalez said Tuesday that he had received a "verbal apology" from the Foreign Ministry's chief of protocol. Panama's government chief, Gen. Omar Torrijos, is on an official European tour.

Chances for peace parley said improved

(c) New York Times

New York — Carter administration officials said Wednesday the agreement reached in the early morning by President Carter and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan of Israel on procedures for a new Middle East peace conference improved chances for convening a session in Geneva by the end of the year.

But, along with the satisfaction, there were words of caution from both Americans and Israelis involved in the protracted diplomatic discussions.

They said the Arab countries might well reject specific aspects of the still unpublished "working paper" drawn up to govern the Geneva conference. The working paper was completed just before 2 a.m. Wednesday by Dayan, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and their aides after Carter had gone to bed. Dayan said at a news conference at 2:15 a.m. that both sides were prepared to take another look at the document in the event of any Arab objections. Americans echoed this later, and they said it would probably take a week or more before an agreement on reconvening the conference could be announced.

Aside from the apparent progress in their negotiations on the procedures and organization of a Middle East Conference, Carter, Dayan and their aides were also able, in their more than six hours of negotiations, to smooth over discord caused in Israeli-American relations last weekend by the Soviet-American declaration of principles for a peace conference.

This action was, for Carter's political sides, even more important than the substantive accord. The aides were deeply concerned over the extremely bitter reaction the Soviet-American document had aroused in the American Jewish community, many of whose prominent members are also leading contributors to and supporters of the Democratic Party.

A sense of relief was also noted in the American Jewish community, which fired off telegrams and statements of praise to Carter Wednesday after having condemned him since Sunday.

There were two categories of agreements reached in the Carter-Vance-Dayan meeting. The first, made public at the 2:15 a.m. news conference, was mainly aimed at assuaging concerns of Israel and its supporters. It said:

— The two sides agreed that Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338 "remain the agreed basis for the resumption of the Geneva peace conference" and that all American-Israeli agreements also remain in effect. This has been American policy, but Israelis were concerned because the Soviet-American document did not cite those resolutions explicitly.

The Israelis like Resolution 242 of 1967 because by its ambiguity Israel understands that it does not have to return all the land it seized in the 1967 war. They also like it because the resolution implicitly affirms Israel's right to exist within "secure and recognized borders." The Arab states, however, insist that Israel is obliged to return the land seized during the 1967 war.

— Acceptance of the Soviet-American statement issued last weekend was "not a prerequisite for the reconvening and conduct of the Geneva conference." The statement never had said it was a prerequisite. But the wide publicity given to some of that statement's phrases, such as "the legitimate rights of the Palestinians," had led to concern in Israel that the United States and the Soviet Union, as co-chairmen of the Geneva Conference, were going to use that document to pressure Israel into agreeing to points not included in Resolution 242 — such as the reference to Palestinian "rights."

Some Arab states had also objected to the Soviet-American document because it did not mention the Palestine Liberation Organization's "right" to be at Geneva and did not explicitly call for Israel's withdrawal from all occupied land.

Wednesday's Israeli-American agreement also noted that the two sides had "developed" proposals for "removing remaining obstacles" to the Geneva conference. These are understood to be the main points of the unpublished "working paper" that Dayan said he had endorsed and submitted to his government for approval.

— At Geneva, the conference would begin with a "plenary group" made up of Israel and a unified Arab delegation. The Arab side would be composed of Egyptians, Syrians, Jordanians, Lebanese and Palestinians. The composition of the Palestinians was not specified because the Israelis want no members of the PLO, and the Arabs say the PLO must be represented.

High-priority conservation projects to net farmers more money

Washington (UPI) — Agriculture Department officials Wednesday announced new changes in the conservation subsidy program to shift emphasis to increased payments for farmers who install high-priority pollution control and conservation projects.

In the past, the department has paid farmers 50 to 75% of the cost of approved conservation projects.

But for 1978, officials said, payments in the $190 million program may range up to 90% of costs for some top-priority work.

Spokesmen said the department would issue a set of nationally approved practices. Local county-level farmer committees will then be asked to develop a list of top priority pollution control and conservation needs for their areas, and farmers who carry out those projects will qualify for high-level payments.

As in the past, officials said, the county committees will be allowed to approve payments for projects which do not appear on the national list. But spokesmen indicated they hoped the financial "carrot" in their new priority plan would de-emphasize spending on practices which offer temporary rather than enduring conservation benefits.

Officials said farmers will be offered long-term conservation subsidy agreements ranging from 3 to 10 years in addition to the usual one-year agreements. Also, they said, special emphasis would be placed on wind erosion control measures such as windbreak tree planting in the Great Plains, and a naval stores conservation aid program would be continued in Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi.

Spokesmen said farmers would not get conservation payments for planting minimum cover crops on land idled under 1978 programs for reducing surplus grain production. But payments may be made where farmers apply "enduring" conservation practices on the idled "set aside" land.

USDA expects modest increase in price of meat

Washington (UPI) — Retail meat prices in the first half of 1978 will be "modestly" above the same period this year, the Agriculture Department says.

The forecast came in a livestock and meat situation summary report which also softened earlier department predictions of improved farm prices in 1978 for high grade grain-fed beef cattle.

The report also said that the average American consumer may eat more beef, pork, lamb and poultry this year than ever before.

Final figures for 1977 may show consumption of red meat up to about 193 pounds per person — a figure based on carcass weights, not the smaller amount of trimmed and cook beef people actually eat — with poultry consumption up to 41 pounds per capita, the report said.

The combined total of about 243 pound would be 2 to 3 pounds above last year's record.

Experts said that while overall beef production would decline next year because of a continuing drop in slaughter of grass-fed animals, production of grain-fed beef from next January through June may be 3 to 4% above a year earlier.

"The suggested increase in fed beef supplies argues against significant price improvement (for farmers) in fed cattle through much of 1978," officials said.

Experts who earlier had predicted January-March prices for choice grade steers at Omaha averaging $42-$44 a hundredweight, for example, lowered the prediction to the $40-$42 range in the latest report.

The deeper Israeli issues

Washington — Israeli relations are strained again for reasons that run much deeper than their latest disagreement over the U.S.-Soviet formula for convening a Middle East conference at Geneva.

It is impossible to understand this latest crisis of confidence without taking into account the different roles of these two countries, their divergent historical perspectives on the Middle East, and the clash of personalities and special interest lobbies that swirl around this controversy.

To begin with, the Carter administration and the Begin government differ fundamentally, not on the objective but on the means of achieving the security of Israel. Carter believes it can be achieved only if Israel makes political and territorial concessions Prime Minister Begin regards as the surrender of his country on the installment plan.

Unable to resolve this fundamental difference, the Israelis ask how they can be expected to leave the fate of their nation to the judgment of Washington, and Washington is beginning to ask — in private if not yet in public — why the United States should help finance a policy it fears will lead to another war, another oil embargo and serious consequences not only for Israel but for the entire international community.

One high official of the Carter administration, reacting to the Israeli criticism of the U.S.-Soviet joint statement on the Geneva Conference, put the official Washington view this way:

"The notion that Israel can keep a million Arabs under occupation is just unreal. No way it can be done. And why should the United States perpetually maintain that situation — at tremendous cost to the international community, to its own security, and eventually to the security of Israel if the Arabs become radicalized and modernized? This is why, ultimately, the present course really is disastrous for Israel."

Israeli officials here reply that they have no intention of keeping a million Arabs under occupation. They say they are trying to save their lives year by year, and that they want to solve the refugee problem, but that it cannot be solved by creating new refugees or a new Palestinian state that would encourage exaggerated hopes that could not be realized.

These differences have existed for so long that the conviction has been growing here that Israel would refuse to make what Washington regards as essential political and territorial concessions so long as it could take Washington's economic and military aid but not its advice. Nobody in authority here has said this directly to the Israelis, but they thought they began to get the message indirectly a couple of weeks ago.

James Reston

Two incidents illustrate the point. When the French premier, Raymond Barre, returned to Paris from his Washington visit a few days ago, he spoke rather freely about how the Carter administration had finally seen the wisdom of De Gaulle's Middle Eastern policy and was now taking a more "realistic" and "even-handed" policy toward the Middle East. The Israelis interpreted this as a more sympathetic U.S. attitude toward the Arabs.

Then last week, Time Magazine ran an article entitled, "How to Lean on Israel," which was carefully noted in the White House and startled the Israelis. It reported that "Israel's dependence on the U.S. has grown to staggering — and probably unhealthy proportions. . . (American aid) now amounts to nearly $2 billion annually. . . About half the U.S. military assistance is also a give-away. . ."

After that came the U.S.-Soviet Geneva statement, which Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan saw only 24 hours before it was made public, and the interpretations, misinterpretations and speculations began. Meanwhile, the head of the U.S. National Security Council, Zbigniew Brezezinski, proclaimed on the Canadian Broadcasting System that the United States had the "legitimate right to exercise its own leverage" to bring about a Geneva conference on the Middle East.

The official view in Washington is that it made no switch at all, that it could not go the Geneva route on the Middle East without the cooperation of the Soviet Union, its Geneva co-chairman, and besides, Moscow had agreed to concessions favorable to Israel.

Some careful reporting on this point suggests that these moves were neither as conspiratorial as the Israelis fear nor as innocent as Washington pretends. There is little doubt that Carter was surprised and irritated, to put it mildly, by Begin's decision to put new and what Carter regards as illegal settlements in occupied Arab territory, and that he is increasingly disturbed by the pressure of the pro-Israeli lobby to pass the money and the ammunition to Israel to be used as Israel pleases.

But it is probably too much to say that Carter has changed his commitments to Israel — he is closer to a guarantee of its modified 1967 borders than ever before — or that he calculated the U.S.-Soviet statement on the Geneva conference to impose an "outside" settlement on the Middle Eastern states.

Policies are not that carefully or cunningly organized in Carter's administration. He has many other things to worry about, not only Israel's security, but U.S. relations with the U.S.S.R., including the control of nuclear arms, the avoidance of war and another oil embargo, and all that would mean not only for Israel but for Western Europe, Japan, and the developing nations.

Accordingly, U.S.-Israeli relations could easily be made even worse than they are by analyzing every word and parsing every sentence in the U.S.-Soviet Geneva communique. What the situation now needs is a little silence, though that is probably expecting too much.

Remorse, mercy combine to close out Watergate

H. R. Haldeman said he had "deepest personal regret for everything I have done" in connection with the Watergate scandal. John Ehrlichman admitted to abdicating his moral judgments. John Mitchell confessed that he was "truly sorry for and regretted those actions of mine that resulted in my conviction."

Thus did the highest ranking Nixon administration officials convicted in the Watergate scandal confess their wrongdoing and remorse for what happened. Judge John Sirica took the taped — ironic, is it not? — admissions of guilt and contrition into consideration as he reduced the prison sentences of the three conspirators. Sirica's actions make Ehrlichman eligible for parole later this month. Haldeman and Mitchell, who entered prison after Ehrlichman, will be eligible for release next June. Their sentences were cut in half by the judge who helped crack the Watergate conspiracy with his tough handling of the principals in the case starting with the burglars who entered the Democratic headquarters at the Watergate complex in June, 1972.

Sirica said he was glad to see the end of the case, and he is not alone. With no more prosecutions pending, the scandal would drift into the nation's subconscious, save for the painful reminder in exile at San Clemente. That justice was not done in his case keeps the issue unpleasantly alive.

Sirica showed that he could be merciful as well as tough in reducing the sentences of Nixon's inner circle. It was an appropriate action on his part. Nothing more could be gained by Haldeman, Mitchell and Ehrlichman serving the longer terms.

And something should be said about the three who will shortly regain their freedom. Doubtless the promise of earlier freedom helped make their confessions of repentance easier. But at least they said it. And they did not appear to be "groveling," as Nixon said he would never do.

In the end, they have salvaged something.

Fireworks ban opposed

Lincoln City Council members earlier this week defused a proposed city effort to lobby for a statewide ban on the private use of fireworks.

Lobbying for statewide prohibitions should be left to the Nebraska League of Municipalities, said Council Chairman Dick Baker. Other council members also voiced disapproval of the proposed fireworks ban.

Mayor Helen Boosalis proposed the lobbying effort earlier this summer. She said she was concerned with fires, injuries and the aggravation caused people by fireworks. The mayor must have received a sizable number of complaints about fireworks. A sizable number of people have complained in the past.

But we think council members who oppose the city lobbying for a statewide ban on fireworks are on the right track, whatever their reasons.

Fireworks are legal here only during a short period encompassing the July 4th holiday. The most dangerous kind of fireworks have already been outlawed. Fireworks, even the minor irritants that remain legal during that period, have traditional value in the celebration of America's national day and the annual rite of summer.

Fireworks involve risks, but so do many of life's pleasures — and a sizable number of people derive pleasure from fireworks. We think that government sometimes goes too far in trying to make life risk-free. If it is allowed to eliminate all of the risks, it will also eliminate most of the pleasures.

The producers have clout

The power of special interests was clearly demonstrated in the capitulation this week of senators opposed to the removal of price controls on natural gas.

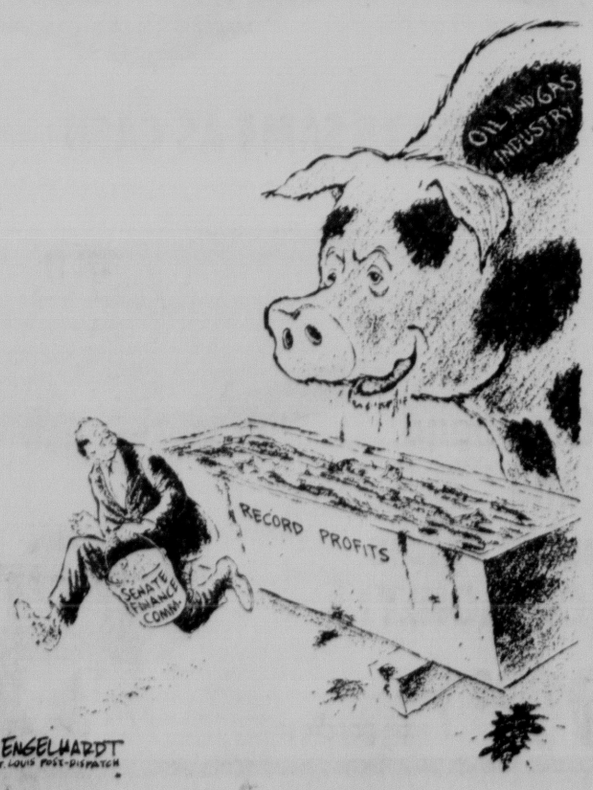

Big Oil and Gas won big in the high stakes game in the U.S. Senate.

The stage is now set, with the Senate's vote to deregulate prices on new gas, for resolving the conflict in House-Senate conference. The House, along with President Carter, is opposed to lifting controls completely. The President has said he will veto legislation in the form passed by the Senate.

While that part of his energy plan awaits final congressional action, consumers may want to review what has gone on in the Senate the past few weeks.

How, for example, can a senator such as Nebraska's Ed Zorinsky, who takes such great pride in saving a few hundred thousand dollars in office expenses, embrace a scheme which will wring additional billions of dollars out of natural gas customers, revenues far in excess of what the President, the House and many senators believe reasonable?

'ATTA, BOY—YOU JUST RUN AND GET ME SOME MORE'

'WELL, MR. CARTER, THE BOYS FOUND IT HAS TOO MANY PARTS'

Energy program victim of haste and tardiness

By Barry M. Hager
CQ Staff Writer

Washington — President Carter is blaming "special interests" for his energy woes with Congress, but much of the fault appears to lie with an ineffective lobbying effort by his own administration.

The widespread judgment on Capitol Hill is that his administration has waged a poorly timed, politically insensitive and error-plagued lobbying battle for his proposals.

Extensive interviews with members of Congress, congressional aides, administration officials and lobbyists on all sides of the issue disclose a catalog of missteps that are costing the President dearly in his search for a national energy policy.,

The major criticisms are that Carter drafted the program in haste last spring, consulted too little with the key committee chairmen in Congress, paid inadequate attention to the program during the crucial months prior to September and either poorly defended or too easily abandoned vital components of the legislation.

In the natural gas pricing filibuster that muddled the Senate for more than two weeks, the administration has seemed confused and undirected. Its communication with the center-stage participants in the filibuster drama, including Sens. Howard M. Metzenbaum (D Ohio) and James Abourezk (D S.D.), has been criticized as inadequate.

Metzenbaum and Abourezk supported Carter's position against removal of federal controls on natural gas prices.

Metzenbaum said that Carter's main energy adviser, Secretary of Energy James R. Schlesinger, had not been in contact with him during that entire week of debate.

The administration also was criticized for compromising too much and too soon.

Early in the debate, Carter's lobbying team indicated a willingness to accept a higher natural gas price but that proved unacceptable to senators pushing deregulation.

As a result, the administration used up some potential leverage for later compromise without getting anything in return.

Several consumer and environmental lobbyists argue that the administration's inability to influence what's going on in the Senate is traceable in part to its failure to back initiatives from its allies.

An example was the administration's decision not to support the moves by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D Mass.) toward horizontal divestiture — keeping gas companies out of coal and uranium ownership.

According to James Flug of the consumer-oriented Energy Action Committee, that decision was a crucial mistake, both tactically and politically.

"If they needed anything once things started to unravel over here in the Senate, they need a good strong showing," Flug said. "Even if they didn't win, which I think they might have done, they could have thrown a scare into the industry and dealt from a position of strength with the oil boys."

Another environmental lobbyist asked: "Why should these guys stick their neck out for Carter when he won't for them?"

But most of Carter's troubles stem from errors made well before the natural gas impasse began in the Senate, largely because of the haste with which the program was put together.

If the administration energy plan was too hastily conceived, it was also inadequately nurtured. House and Senate aides criticize the President for not continuing to build public support for the program by speeches and appearances throughout the summer.

Worse yet, the administration team of lobbyists, principally Schlesinger and his aides have been widely criticized on Capitol Hill for inadequate or tardy legwork — the briefing of congressional staffers on substantive issues and the early and steady checking to meet the needs and doubts of legislators.

The main defense of the administration lobbying team to these criticisms is that they have been overworked and spread too thin. Barely a dozen persons have shouldered the burdens of lobbying for and gearing up the brand-new cabinet-level Energy Department, trying to build public and state government support for Carter's program and lobbying Congress for the many pieces of that program.

Even though the outlook for Carter's energy package now is grim, his supporters are quick to remind that House conferees are likely to repair much of the damage done by the Senate, when the conference committee gets together to work out a compromise.

A sick industry

Washington — Steel is in trouble. Laid-off steel workers are demonstrating in Washington and the pressure will grow for protectionist measures to keep out imports from Japan. Whether it is a higher tariff or a so-called voluntary quota agreement, one thing is sure: Steel prices in this country will rise.

That has been the precedent. In 1967, when voluntary quotas were agreed to, steel prices rose 16%.

To be laid off from a plant where you've worked all your life and your father and perhaps even your grandfather have worked is deeply disheartening. So you march in front of the Capitol and the White House even though you know that the plant in Youngstown, Ohio, built in 1900, is likely to be closed down for good.

At the same time the steel companies are putting out a barrage of propaganda about cheap Japanese steel being "dumped" in the American market, thanks to government subsidies. This complements the pressure of laid-off workers in an industry that is operating at only 72% of capacity.

But hard evidence gives a contrary picture. A strong rebuttal comes from the brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith. Based on a detailed study of the Japanese steel industry for its own and its clients' information, Merrill Lynch found that steel companies in Japan were not subsidized by government and they operate on a profit motive.

Why then should Japanese prices be lower than those in the United States? The Merrill Lynch study found the answer simple — productivity. Labor productivity in Japan based on calculations of tons produced per year is 60% above the U.S. figure. In Japan the average employe produces 400 tons of steel in a normal year compared with 250 tons in the U.S.

Here at home, according to the study, we have only one plant that can be called modern, while in Japan few plants are not modern. Plants in the United States go back to 1890. In contrast, the Japanese are dismantling a plant built in 1955 to replace it with one more efficient.

Basic oxygen furnaces, the most efficient method of making steel, account for more than 80% of Japanese production and only slightly more than 60% in the United States. Open-hearth furnaces, the least efficient method, account for 18% of U.S. steel, virtually none in Japan. The plant in Youngstown has 12 open-hearth furnaces.

In testimony before a House subcommittee, William D. Nordhaus, a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, added more documentation on the sickness of the steel industry. Average hourly earnings of production workers in blast furnaces and basic steel products, Nordhaus pointed out, rose 133% from 1967 to the second quarter of 1977. The average for all manufacturing over the same period was 97%.

Steel workers are now the highest paid in any manufacturing industry. Yet a new collective bargaining agreement grants, allowing for six per cent inflation, increases averaging 9.3% a year through 1980.

While most foreign producers have responded to weak demand by lowering prices, Nordhaus told the House committee, U.S. steel producers have continued to increase prices regardless of world market conditions.

Prices for iron and steel were nearly 40% above the wholesale price index for all products. And anti-pollution measures, about which the companies complain, accounted for only a small part of the "cost explosion."

The remedy is modernization of the steel industry and a revision of the cost structure based on today's realities. Nordhaus held out the prospect that the forthcoming tax revision bill will contain measures to aid investment in modernization and new plants.

President Carter, speaking to the annual conference of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, pledged a growth rate for 1977 of six per cent. This would be achieved without resort to protectionism.

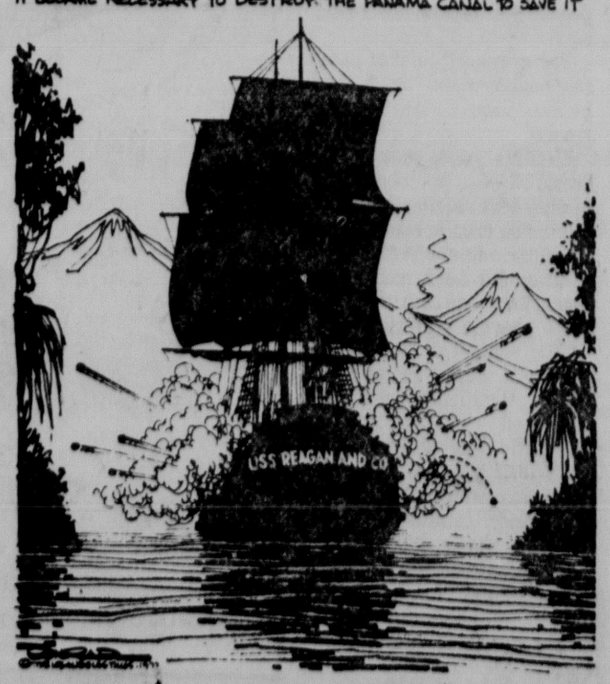

To hold off the protectionists will take all the true grit Carter can muster. Most of organized labor is protectionist, with AFL-CIO boss George Meany as the thundering advocate of shutting out foreign competition. And Meany likes to remind Carter that, having helped him to get elected, it is only justice to put up higher trade barriers.

As pressure built up for protection for color television sets and television parts, chief trade negotiator Robert Strauss rushed over to Tokyo to negotiate a "voluntary" quota. But whether quotas are the answer is a question.

With an increase in the tariff, a competitor in a foreign country can see what the stakes are and even outpace them.

Farmers Union chief, rancher are honored

A North Platte rancher and livestock industry leader along with the fifth state president of the Nebraska Farmers Union were recognized by the Nebraska Hall of Agricultural Achievement in Lincoln Wednesday night.

Wesley F. Hansen, a lifelong resident of the Hansen Ranch in North Platte, and Elton L. Berck, a retired farmer who farmed in Polk County, join a select group which had its origin in 1917.

Neil Oxton, Farmer's Union spokesman, delivered a tribute to Berck, and said Berck was "truly Mr. Agriculture" when he served as president of the Nebraska Farmers Union, because of his broad background and knowledge.

"The National Farmers Union relied heavily upon Berck as a special representative before both the Senate and the House of Representatives," Oxton said.

Berck, who farmed in Polk County earlier in his career and later attended the University of Nebraska, was presented the Builders Award from the NU Board of Regents in 1974. He received the Meritorious Service Award, the highest honor bestowed by the National Farmers Union.

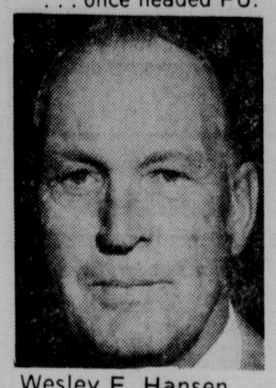

Hansen owns and operates the "77 Ranch" northwest of North Platte and "Keystone Ranch" east of Lake McConaughy. Dr. Leo Lucas, director of the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service and former superintendent of the NU North Platte station, characterized Hansen as "an extremely involved citizen of his community, state and nation, particularly as it relates to the well-being of agriculture with special emphasis on the cattle industry."

Hansen is a past president of the Sandhills Cattle Association, Nebraska Stock Growers Association, Grasslands Livestock Association and Nebraska Feeders and Breeders Association.

He played an active role in the establishment of the U.S. Meat Animal Research Center near Clay Center and has served on advisory committees for the North Platte Station and the former College of Agriculture advisory council. He served as a 4-H club leader for 18 years.

West views back some health care

Scottsbluff (AP) — Most western Nebraska residents interviewed by federal Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) officials think some form of national health care is needed, but they also believe patients' rights to choose their own doctors and hospitals should be protected, an HEW spokesman said Tuesday night.

Richard J. Wall, director of HEW public affairs at Kansas City, told about 80 persons at a hearing that information gathered by HEW in its Nebraska interviews would be forwarded to Washington, D.C.

He said that while most people interviewed had no objection to some form of national health care, most felt strongly that the right of patients to choose their own physicians should be retained.

Most of the people interviewed also think the government should extend health care now available to some portions of the population to all, but that individuals should pay part of the cost with the government picking up the rest, Wall said.

Wall said he was disappointed by the small turnout of consumers Tuesday night, adding that more doctors and other health care professionals came to the hearing than HEW expected.

Sewage plant discovered dumping in Sarpy County

Omaha (AP) — The Nebraska Department of Environmental Control says thousands of gallons of raw sewage have been pouring into Squaw Creek in Sarpy County from a faulty treatment plant.

The department said Tuesday an average 54,000 gallons of raw sewage enter the creek daily from the Sanitary and Improvement District 14 plant.

The problem was discovered during a routine inspection.

A spokesman said the SID did not report the situation.

Plant operator Gary Bland told state officials the sewage has been flowing since last Friday.

Officials hope the problem is solved before Nov. 1, when work on a sewage line is to be completed so the wastes can be funneled into the new Omaha-Papio Creek system, and the plant is phased out.

Joe L. Cavalieri, SID chairman, said he was aware of problems at the plant, but not that raw sewage was running in the creek.

He said the plant was not built to handle the current volume of wastes, and that vandalism and other problems have risen.

Cavalieri said the SID has worked for years to end the pollution. He said various delays in getting a federal grant have delayed completion of the sewer project.

Cavalieri said the SID again will make repairs to get the wastes out of the creek while awaiting completion of the new line.

Discarded bullet injures Omaha garbage worker

Omaha (AP) — An employe of Omaha's garbage compactor plant was wounded Tuesday when a .22-caliber cartridge apparently thrown away with someone's garbage exploded.

Plant Manager Mike Hanrahan said Ozie Hill, 58, was struck in the face by the slug. Hill was not seriouisly injured and returned to work after treatment at a hospital.

K-Mart withdraws children's robes

Washington (AP) — K-Mart Department Stores has found a small lot of girls' robes treated with the flame retardant Fyrol FR-2 and is removing them from its shelves, the Environmental Defense Fund said Wednesday.

The fund said it had received a telegram from K-Mart saying that a shipment of 1,600 dozen of the robes sizes 8 to 14 was involved and all affected K-Mart stores have been instructed to remove them from sale.

Laboratory tests of Fyrol have produced conflicting reports on whether the chemical causes cancer. The Consumer Product Safety Commission now is studying the various results.

A spokesman for the commission said the agency appreciates "any responsible action done voluntarily by retailers."

The environmental fund sent telegrams last week to K-Mart, J.C. Penney Co. and Federated Department Stores asking them to remove children's sleepwear treated with Fyrol from the market, saying the chemical is suspected of causing cancer.

Robert Rauch, a staff attorney for the fund, said K-Mart action was "a fine example of corporate responsibility." The fund said it was sending telegrams to Penney's and Federated renewing its request.

Spokesmen for both Penneys and Federated have said they were looking into the situation.

Senate solid behind Curtis delay on water policy

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Wednesday unanimously adopted a resolution introduced by Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb. to put a six-month moratorium on implementation of a new national water resources policy and to establish procedures for state comments and congressional hearings.

Curtis had 35 cosponsors for the resolution he said was introduced "to guarantee the opportunity for the states to take part in the formation of a new national water resources policy."

The resolution directs the administration, after publishing water proposals in the Federal Register, to send copies of them and information about them to the states.

The resolution then provides for a six-month period to allow ample opportunity for comment and hearings.

Hastings center chief has resigned

Hastings (UPI) — Dr. George Osborne, medical director at the hastings regional center, has announced he is returning to private practice to specialize in surgery and surgical diagnosis.

Osborne said he will continue as medical director at the regional center part-time. Prior to joining the staff at the regional center, Osborne was in private practice in Hastings from 1967-75.

Holdrege gets 2 new doctors

Holdrege — Two new doctors will begin their practice in Holdrege in the fall of 1978, according to Del Pearson, president of the Holdrege Industrial and Development Corporation.

Dr. Michael L. Westcott, a Lincoln native, and Dr. Jim Dean Emery, of Nebraska City, are both completing their residency requirements in family practice, Pearson said. Westcott is currently working at a hospital in Flint, Mich. and Emery is at a hospital in Modesto, Calif., he added.

"We are pleased to have secured these two fine doctors for Holdrege," Pearson said. "Facilities for the two men are planned and will be announced soon," he added.

Brownville — A six-home tour and an arts and crafts festival will highlight the annual Fall Festival Days in historic Brownville Saturday and Sunday.

"Restoration-the Challenge and the Rewards," is the theme of the home tour, and three of the homes on display will show early stages of restoration. Three completed homes, including the Gates House, the oldest brick house on record in Nebraska, will complete the tour, according to officials of the Brownville Historical Society.

Waterflow meeting set

Columbus — Dr. Berton Lamb, legal and institutional affairs specialist with the Cooperative Instream Flow Service Group of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service at Fort Collins, Colo. will be the featured speaker at a public meeting on streamflow protection at the Holiday Inn in Columbus Saturday.

The morning sessions of the meeting are open to the public.

New reservoir filling

Elwood — Water began flowing into the new Elwood Reservoir Wednesday afternoon to mark the beginning of a several-months project, according to officials of the Central Nebraska Public Power and Irrigation District.

The $3.2 million project was financed by the Bureau of Reclamation.

KSC gets HEW grant

Kearney — Kearney State College has received a $43,809 grant from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to initiate a rural social work program on the KSC campus.

The program, according to college officials, is a departure from most social work programs which emphasize urban problems.

Scott kayaks for charity

Nebraska City — A Scotland native who is attempting to kayak the lengths of the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers made a brief stop in Nebraska City Tuesday afternoon.

Nick Francis, of Edinburgh, Scotland, said his trip will be the longest trip ever attempted for charity as well as the first conquering of the two rivers by kayak. The British Cancer Research Campaign, in cooperation with the American Cancer Society, is sponsoring the trip.

Sprague festival set

Sprague — The annual Sprague Fall Festival begins Saturday with a 10 a.m. parade, according to the Sprague Men's Club, primary sponsors of the event.

Games, pony rides, an auction and smorgasboard lunch of home-cooked foods will also be featured during the day.

Shipment of jerky thought unsafe

Omaha (AP) — Asst. U.S. Atty. Robert Kokrda has filed in federal district court here a complaint charging that a York firm is in possession of a shipment of Buffalo Jerky that is adulterated with sodium nitrate, an allegedly unsafe additive.

The complaint defines Buffalo Jerky as round patties of dried bison meat with additives. A similar chewing product, called Buffalo Chips, also is listed in the complaint as adulterated.

The products were shipped by Smokey's Smokehouse, Spanish Fork, Utah, about March 17 and now are located at Grumpy's Buffalo Jerky Co. in York, Kokrda said.

The suit asks the court to declare the products unfit and to order them destroyed under the provisions of the Pure Food and Drug Act.

Aviation center operator apparently flew coop

Grand Island (UPI) — James Hellman, who operated the aviation center at the Hall County Airport, apparently has left the area owing about $378,000 in debts, authorities said Wednesday.

Three suits have been filed against Hellman, who has not been seen in Grand Island since last spring.

Norm Anderson, from whom Hellman purchased the aviation center for $189,000, said he hasn't been paid, and the Platte Valley Trust Co. at Kearney said it hasn't been repaid for $189,000 it loaned Hellman.

Hellman forfeited his lease at the airport last month after missing several payments.

Rogers wouldn't have contested Thone

Omaha (AP) — A candidate for the Republican nomination for governor said Tuesday he would not have decided to enter the race if Rep. Charles Thone had told him a year ago he planned to seek the post.

Vance Rogers said he discussed the matter with Thone well before Rogers announced his candidacy early this year.

Rogers said Thone told him "you absolutely have to run . . . I may possibly run against you, but you have got to run."

If Thone had said he definitely planned to run for governor at that time, Rogers said he would have taken one of two attractive jobs he had been offered.

Thone told newsmen in Washington last week he likely will seek the gubernatorial nomination, and added that he would make a formal announcement in January.

Rogers commented in Omaha, where he spoke to the Lions Club.

Rogers resigned as president of Nebraska Wesleyan University in May. He said Thone was the first person he talked to in 1976 when Rogers was deciding whether to run for governor in 1978.

Rogers said he received encouragement from Thone, along with the indication the congressman might be a candidate himself.

Rogers said he decided to run later after talking to about 200 Nebraskans who encouraged him. He said he believes he would make a better governor than Thone because of his 20 years experience as an administrator.

In his speech, Rogers said his campaign will emphasize the importance of agriculture to Nebraska, tax equality and possible solutions to water and energy problems statewide.

Fugitive captured in Omaha

Omaha (AP) — Larry Wayne, 27, believed to be a ringleader in the escape of nine prisoners from the St. Louis city jail last year, was shot and captured in Omaha early Wednesday, authorities said.

Police, acting on a tip that Wayne was hiding in a North Omaha house, went to the home just after midnight.

As officers approached Wayne fled out a rear door of the house and was struck in the leg by a charge from a police shotgun, authorities said.

Wayne also was accused of the stabbing Tuesday of James Freeman, manager of the apartment building in which the fugitive was living.

Wayne allegedly used a pistol smuggled into the St. Louis jail to free himself and eight other prisoners Aug. 4, 1976.

At the time of the escape Wayne was being held for transfer to the Missouri Penitentiary on a murder conviction. He had earlier served six years of an 18-year sentence on another murder conviction.

The eight men who fled from the jail with Wayne were later recaptured.

Hall County joins statewide treatment plan

Grand Island (UPI) — Hall County will become one of the first counties in outstate Nebraska to participate in a statewide alcohol treatment program, county board member Don Marquard said.

Marquard said the county will take approximately $2,400 from its human resources fund and use it to get state funds for improved treatment of alcoholics.

Under a bill passed by the legislature this year, 10 times the amount appropriated by the county may be generated for alcohol recovery programs, including the eventual creation of a detoxification center in Grand Island.

English language study views to be exchanged

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

The two meetings are billed as public forums — meetings to share and exchange information, ideas and beliefs about English language study in the Lincoln Public Schools.

Nebraska Wesleyan English professor Ken Holder said the meetings, planned for Oct. 25 and Nov. 2, should result in a better understanding of what goes on in the English classroom now as well as what might be done.

"The purpose is not to suggest policy, nor to criticize present methods of instruction. It is not a gripe session," said Roger Cognard, Wesleyan English professor.

With the help of a $1,000 grant from the Nebraska Committee for the Humanities, these two men have organized the public meetings under the title, "An Exploration of Humanism and English Language Study in the Lincoln Public Schools."

Through panel discussions, an interview of an expert and discussion among parents, teachers and administrators, the two men hope that differing viewpoints will be aired.

The humanist sees the study of the English language as a means of understanding humans, as an art and as a way of expressing our humanity, the two men said.

At the opposite extreme are those who see English teaching as purely preparing students for the job market, they said.

These two professors believe there is room for both the creative use of language and the teaching of basic skills in the classroom.

But it isn't their personal viewpoint that is important for the public meetings. It is the sharing and understanding that may come through the public discussions, they said.

The programs are specifically aimed at parents of school children, teachers, administrators and school board members, although other concerned citizens are welcome.

Typical questions the two hope will be addressed include:

— Is the primary function of language study to equip students with a set of job skills?

— Does an understanding of language help a student make value judgments?

— What is the relationship between knowledge of grammar and the ability to write well?

— Should writing be taught as a practical skill or as a means of expressing one's humanity?

The first meeting on Oct. 25 will include public discussion followed by a telephone interview with William Coles Jr., professor of English at the University of Pittsburgh.

Coles has 24 years of teaching experience and in devising programs for teaching English. His numerous written works include two books on teaching writing.

The second meeting on Nov. 2 will be a panel discussion, followed by public questions.

Panel members are Bob Baden, a teacher in the humanities at Concordia College; Mary Commerce, teacher at Southeast High School; Ruth Ann Lyness, English consultant for the Lincoln Public Schools; and Mr. and Mrs. Don Svehla, parents.

Both meetings will be held from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. in the Vance D. Rogers Fine Arts Center on the Nebraska Wesleyan University campus.

The $1,000 grant is being matched by time and materials donated by the two men and the committee they formed to work on the public forum idea.

The two programs will be evaluated by Carrol Peterson, assistant professor of English at Doane College.

Kearney councilman faces assembled critics

Kearney (UPI) — There was standing room only Tuesday night as 150 spectators crammed into the city council chambers to hear complaints about council member Carroll Sheldon.

A special meeting focused on Sheldon's alleged violations of the Kearney municipal code and state statutes.

City building inspector Paul Mead said Sheldon, a local contractor, erected a building that originally was supposed to be a fraternity. The structure, he said, did not meet regulations for a fraternity, but was acceptable as a motel.

"This building is not a motel and never has been a motel," Meade said.

Sheldon said the structure qualifies as a motel because the building is leased and its occupants can charge overnight visitors. The building, Sheldon said, "can be used for whatever they (occupants) see fit."

Other allegations included a charge that unlicensed electricians and plumbers worked on Sheldon's buildings, that Sheldon installed potentially dangerous gas-line mounts and built parking lot lights and off-street parking on property owned by the city.

Sheldon said the journeyman plumber he employed was "as good or better than any master plumber in Kearney." He said there are other establishments in town that also encroach on city property. The gas company, he said, notified him two years ago about the gas-line mounts and he secured the mounts immediately.

Sheldon is leading a petition drive aimed at repealing the uniform building code adopted by the council last month over Sheldon's opposition.

State Patrol Omaha troop gets new commander

Omaha (UPI) — Lt. William R. Piercy, 52, a 28-year veteran of the Nebraska State Patrol, will be promoted to the rank of captain and assigned as commander of Troop A, headquartered in Omaha, effective Oct. 15.

The promotion was announced Wednesday by Col. C. P. Karthauser, head of the State Patrol. He said Piercy will replace Capt. Willard W. Clark, a 30-year veteran of the patrol, who will retire effective Oct. 16.

Piercy has served as an assistant to Clark in the Omaha troop, Karthauser said.

Polled women see alcohol problems

By Linda Olig
Star Staff Writer

Most Nebraska women who responded to a recent survey said they have had problems as the result of their own drinking or the alcohol consumption of others.

However, only 2.2% said they had personally had problems caused by their own use of drugs.

The survey results were released Wednesday by the Nebraska Task Force on Women, Alcohol and Drugs.

The survey was sent to the 1,920 Nebraska women on the mailing list of the Nebraska Commission on the Status of Women. Only 370 women, less than 20% of those surveyed, responded, said Carol Hunter, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln graduate student who compiled the results.

Nebraska women surveyed have a "relatively high level of knowledge about alcoholism," Ms. Hunter said, "but their attitudes reflect the stigma with which the society as a whole views the subject."

For example, many respondants indicated they feel that alcoholism is a disease, but that alcoholism is self-inflicted and could be remedied with will power.

More than 63% of the respondants said they had knowingly used tranquilizers, barbituates, sleeping pills or diet pills, most of them prescribed by a physician. More than three-fourths of those surveyed said they were not warned of the possibility of becoming addicted to the prescription drugs.

While few women said they had a problem with drug use, 59% said they knew other women with drug or alcohol related problems.

From the survey, it would seem that women are taking their first drinks away from home at an earlier age, Ms. Hunter said.

Just over 12% of the respondants said they drink daily, 31.7% said they drink weekly and the same number drinks monthly, the survey found.

While only 5.5% of the women surveyed said their own drinking had caused them problems, 46.1% said the drinking of others was a problem to them.

However, 77.4% of those responding said they had not sought help for the alcohol problems.

Ms. Hunter noted that 66% of the respondents said they work outside the home. Only 41% of all women statewide are employed. In addition, 90% of the respondents had attended college, and 68% were married. Most of the women surveyed were between 26 and 50 years of age and resided in either Lancaster or Douglas County.

State position may jeopardize federal aid to college students

Omaha (AP) — Federal incentive grants for college students in Nebraska may be jeopardized by the state's position against financing students at private institutions, federal officials said in Omaha Tuesday.

The funds, totaling about $400,000 for needy students, come through the Bureau of Student Financial Assistance in Washington, D.C.

Richard McVity, bureau director, said the program is in its fourth year and that funds are coming to Nebraska under a special arrangement.

Nebraska is one of several states which do not allow state funds to be distributed to students at private colleges.

The federal government's State Student Incentive Grant rules require that federal grants be matched by each state. Federal officials have permitted Nebraska to receive the money and distribute it to private and public college students.

However, private colleges must match the federal funds which normally are matched by states.

McVity said the defeat of a proposed state constitutional amendment last year puts Nebraska in a worse position today in regard to distribution of aid to private college students.

The proposal would have allowed the State of Nebraska to distribute public money to private education.

Farmers Strike leader stresses nonviolent tactics

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

Ravenna — The headquarters for the Farmers Strike movement in Nebraska is an abandoned feedlot office on Neb. 2. It's a rather ordinary green building with bright red signs crudely posted on the side.

"That red is the color of family farmers' blood," says George Boucher, who heads what he calls a "movement, not an organization."

Boucher, a native of Gregory, S.D., can recall the Farmer Holiday movement in South Dakota like it happened yesterday.

"We lost a farm and a ranch simply because we couldn't pay our taxes. We sold a huge bunch of cattle and deposited a check for $9,000 in the local bank just before it closed for the day. It closed for good and we had nothing," he said.

Boucher has written two books on the cattle business and has almost finished a third entitled "20 Non-Violent Ways to Get 100% of Parity."

He has played semi-pro baseball and has been a cattle feeder and cattle breeder, marketing purebred Hereford and Charolais cattle in every state in the lower 48 and in some foreign countries.

Boucher still owns about 100 beef cows and has a string of show horses he takes great pride in. "My farming operation has basically been turned over to my son, so I have plenty of time for the Farmers Strike movement," he said.

Boucher ran for the Legislature in 1974, but is glad he lost. "I would be miserable down in Lincoln," he said.

He was chairman of a committee that worked with Sens. Loran Schmit of Bellwood and John DeCamp of Neligh to fight chain stores in a meat marketing dispute.

Boucher has teamed with former State Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff, who is organizing a demonstration in Scottsbluff for Oct. 10.

Carpenter has promised to "go anywhere, speak anywhere and do anything you want. He said he would become our unpaid hired hand in an effort to organize the farmers into a strike," Boucher said.

Holly Hodge, a former president of the Nebraska Wheat Growers Assn., also is supporting Boucher's movement.

In addition, support has come from California onion growers, Texas cattlemen, South Dakota, Kansas and Oklahoma wheat and milo growers and farm organization leaders.

"They keep wanting me to come out to organize them. I am getting too old to stand that kind of pace at 60. I can talk at a few big meetings, but the farmers are going to have to make this thing work themselves," he said.

Boucher has his tractor ready for Farmers Strike movement.

Boucher is spending a good deal of his own money on the strike movement, but avoids collecting dues from any members. "That could lead to accounting, records and a lot of expense. I can use some help in the form of donations of time, signs, posters and printing," he said.

Details on his long-range plans for the movement are vague. "I would be real happy to turn the whole thing over to a good group of leaders. Until we get some leaders, I guess my wife and I will just plug along at it with the help of some friends," he said.

The planned strike is set for Dec. 14, the date when Congress is planning a recess. "We wanted to give Congress a chance to act on a new farm bill to get us 100% of parity. I don't think they will anyway, but they deserve a chance to try," he said.

If the strike is successful in getting the prices of farm production up to 100% of parity, the group leading the movement hopes to establish a council of farmers and agribusinessmen to keep marketing problems to a minimum.

"We will rely on the ordinary channels of marketing to do the job but we will watch them," Boucher said.

The program is aimed at getting government guarantees for better farm prices at a level above the cost of production. "They got it in France when their farmers struck. If it worked in France, it can work here," he said.

The goals of the strike include a ban on all beef imports, a return of the Department of Agriculture in Washington to the control of farmers, parity prices for both domestic and imported agricultural production and parity prices for all U.S. farm products to be exported.

Boucher's big fear is violence. "These are angry men and women on farms. We have got to keep the lid on violence or we will lose the whole ball game," he said.

Boucher feels the best spokespeople for agriculture are the wives of farmers. "If this thing works, it will be because of the WIFE (Women Involved in Farm Economics) group. They are wonderful," he said.

Truck crushes farm worker

Bertrand (AP) — A farm worker was crushed to death on a farm about 3 miles north of Bertrand Wednesday.

A Phelps County Sheriff's deputy said Bruce A. O'Guinn, 24, Chicago, a hired hand, was unloading grain into an auger when he climbed onto the grain truck beneath the raised box, apparently to clean the rear window of the truck cab. O'Guinn apparently fell, tripping the lever which caused the grain box to come down and crush him.

UPS loses tax appeal

Omaha (UPI) — The Douglas County Board has boosted the taxes for United Parcel Service on uniforms and maitenance supplies it has stored in Omaha.

The board backed county Assessor Frank Bemis in ruling that the uniforms, maintenance equipment and supplies are subject to personal property tax in the county.

An attorney for UPS contended the material and uniforms were being held here for distribution to UPS offices in other cities and should be taxes there, not in Douglas County.

In 1975, the board sided with the parcel service and said it did not have to pay personal property taxes on the goods, but Tuesday the board ruled the opposite way.

As a result of the board's ruling, UPS will pay taxes on $344,245 instead of $46,660 it had listed as personal property.

The board also turned down the appeal of Xerox Corp., which disputed the valuation the assessor had placed on business equipment and machines leased in Douglas County.

Denial of the Xerox appeal means it will pay taxes on personal property valued at $8 million instead of $4.5 million it claimed.

Not one Dodge County lawyer shows up to protest revisions

Fremont (AP) — Dodge County attorneys didn't show up to voice objections to legislative revisions in the state criminal code, despite receiving invitations to a Unicameral Judiciary Committee hearing.

Fremont Sen. Barry Reutzel, who chaired Tuesday's hearing on the code revisions, said he personally invited more than 60 lawyers in the county to testify at the session.

He said invitations were sent primarily because of a Dodge County Bar Association resolution passed last April opposing mass revision of the criminal code.

Reutzel said attorneys apparently have changed their position on the revisions or that the objections weren't strong enough to warrant their offering recommendations to the legislature on the code.

Omahan Daub narrows option to Second District or 'nothing'

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

Former Douglas County Republican Chairman Hal Daub of Omaha expects to decide by early November whether he will make a run for the Second District congressional seat now held by Democratic Rep. John Cavanaugh.

A couple of meetings this weekend with friends and supporters could be crucial in determining which way he will go, Daub said Wednesday.

"I've done all the talking in the world with people and narrowed my political options to the Second District," he said. "It's that or nothing."

Cavanaugh, Nebraska's lone Democratic congressman, is expected to attract plenty of Republican opposition next year.

The former state senator won his first House term last year and now faces what has been an even bigger test for Democratic incumbents.

Democrats have won five House races in Nebraska since 1948. Four Democratic incumbents failed to win re-election; Cavanaugh will (presumably) be the fifth to try.

His 1976 victory in the Omaha-dominated Second District was the first Democratic House triumph there in 28 years.

Daub declined to discuss Cavanaugh's prospects at this time, but he said he is encouraged by recent Republican victories in special House contests throughout the nation.

The GOP has won three of four.

And, Daub said, his study of the results shows that the districts are not dissimilar from Nebraska's Second District in such factors as athnic and economic characteristics.

"Those victories are a very encouraging sign," he noted.

If he decides to run, Daub said, he faces some disadvantages in terms of name recognition and political base.

Other Republican prospects have more of both. They include former Mayor Robert Cunningham, Douglas County Commissioner Michael Albert, former County Commissioner P. J. Morgan, former City councilman Monte Taylor and 1976 GOP nominee Lee Terry.

"I know it would be a tough race and a tough life," Daub said. "Fortunately, I'm not bit by the political bug. I have no feeling that I've got to run."

Daub is an executive with Standard Chemical Manufacturing Company in Omaha.

Orchestra goes directly to people

Dunlap says orchestra 'like a Boston Pops on wheels.'

By Patty Beutler
Star Staff Writer

When you're small, it's easy for a giant to step on you, concedes Daniel Dunlap. But he's not about to let that happen to the Nebraska Chamber Orchestra.

Manager of the orchestra just two months now, Dunlap is making plans for a season that will sustain the apparent success the group has had in its first three years.

"We hear a lot of criticism for being a church orchestra," Dunlap said. But he's quick to add that many talented groups, like the Evanston Symphony, got their start that way.

Rehearsals and concerts at the First Plymouth Church and performances at other churches accompanying choirs for special services may be responsible for the label. But these concerts are only part of the orchestra's story.

Organized in 1974 by Arnold Schatz, who now serves as concertmaster as well as board president, the orchestra draws its 30 members principally from the Omaha and Lincoln symphonies.

A smaller spin-off group, the chamber orchestra takes its music to the people across the state as much as possible. "The fact that we're based in Lincoln is beside the point," Dunlap stressed.

The emphasis on bringing music to the people outside the major urban areas is "bery chic in artistic terms" the new manager boasts.

This summer the orchestra found itself literally afloat as it rode upriver on the Belle of Brownville for a twilight concert at Smith Landing in a woodsy setting against the bluffs.

A June noon-time concert in a Seward industrial plant was a first for the orchestra, but an example of "what they've been doing in Europe for years," Dunlap said.

"No fancy overhead, no arts center. It was taking music to the people," he stressed. "Like a Boston Pops on wheels."

A barn dance concert in Bassett left the musicians, who dressed in western garb for the occasion, with good feelings, Dunlap said. Finding orchestrated square dance music wasn't easy, he said. Nevertheless the orchestra was relieved to rely on its waltz and polka repertoire when it turned out no one knew how to square dance!

Audience reaction statewide pleases the musicians. "The people love it. Many have never heard a symphony orchestra before," he said. "We want to break down the stereotype visions of what a chamber orchestra does."

The musicians demonstrate their capabilities by varying the music from concert to concert. Lighter programs are balanced with more demanding performances.

The 24-year-old manager-violinist describes the orchestra as an "embryo in that very delicate stage, a new life that will be a powerful force."

The orchestra is entering its fourth season. "It takes that long to get people to realize that we're here and that we're not fooling about this thing. Our philosophy and thrust haven't changed at all," Dunlap said.

To firmly establish its position in the music community, the orchestra will inaugurate a three-concert series at First Plymouth Church with two guest soloists and a guest conductor at each performance. "Piggyback" performances the night before or the night after the concert will carry the program to Seward audiences.

Containing his excitement isn't easy for Dunlap. "We've been listed in various series before, but it's our own baby this time."

The first concert is scheduled for Oct. 21. International concert violinist Stephanie Chase and pianist Larry Grahan, the only American finalist in the 1977 Arthur Rubenstein international competition in Tel Aviv, are the guest soloists. Both will give masters classes the week before the concert. Robert Olson, director of the Boulder Civic Opera in Colorado, is scheduled as guest conductor.

Dunlap's own career as a violin soloist, teacher, author and inventor has put him in touch with internationally known musicians he hopes to recruit for concerts with the chamber orchestra.

He's thrilled about "our little, tiny orchestra getting big-name, blockbuster material."

Talent aside, what Dunlap has found most comforting about the Nebraska Chamber Orchestra is that it's like a family. "You don't have different strata of management. We're all working together."

IMPORT FAIR OCTOBER 3-15

UNL's emeriti donate wisdom of their years

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

At the graduation receptions the silver-haired men and women circulate through the crowd congratulating graduates and parents, answering questions and just generally "gladhanding" the crowd.

"We congratulate the parents, who think they finally have these children off their hands," said Lee Chatfield, a retired University of Nebraska-Lincoln administrator.

"Those of us who are grandparents could tell them differently. But we don't," said Chatfield, whose humor is as lively as his retirement life is active.

These retired teachers and administrators, who number more than 20, are the NU Ambassadors, a newly formed volunteer public relations service.

The ambassadors, generally drawn from the ranks of the UNL emeriti, man the university's State Fair exhibit, help with campus tours and serve as hosts for graduation and honors convocation receptions.

The one-year-old group provides not only a public relations service but also gives the emeriti a closer link with the UNL chancellor's office, said Chatfield.

And the volunteer service benefits both the university and the individuals.

These retired professors and administrators, whose average age is 75, still have their intellectual and physical vigor for many years, said Chatfield, himself 70.

The Ambassadors program helps to identify the emeriti with the ongoing university and also makes use of these professionals' numerous contacts and years of knowledge.

"I had 25 years of administrative experience. And I still know my way around after five years (of retirement)," said Chatfield.

Chatfield, who ws dean of academic services at UNL, had some insights into the psychology of retirement and the personal benefit of such groups as the NU Ambassadors.

"You won't see the new crop (of retired teachers and administrators) for about a year," said Chatfield. "They have to feel their way along."

Chatfield describes that feeling as "we ain't what we used to be, but we haven't gone yet."

Gradually the retired professionals begin to return to university functions, to visit a few minutes at their old office, perhaps to become active in the emeriti group, said Chatfield, who has served as president of the emeriti group and is now chairman of the legislative committee.

The retired men and women who work as ambassadors are "willing to help out, but reluctant to commit time or great amounts of time," said Chatfield.

They relish their freedom and want "to use it for (their) own enjoyment."

They want a balance between the freedom of retirement and the feeling of usefulness found in volunteer commitments.

"We want to be needed, but not too essential."

The NU Ambassadors provides this balance.

Suzy Skates attracts plenty of attention

(c) New York Times

San Francisco — Suzy Skates was out for a roll on Polk Street here the other evening, snarling traffic, as usual. She was dressed for work: pink tights, polka-dot miniskirt, shiny black "bomber" jacket and white roller skates with black laces.

Miss Skates, who is 6 feet tall not counting the wheels, is in her own business. For a fee, she will distribute handbills, make deliveries, and act as a greeter or escort, all on roller skates.

Miss Skates (she won't disclose her real last name) is a 20-year-old art student from Los Angeles and has become a minor celebrity here since she rolled onto the scene seven months ago.

"I needed a job and asked if they needed someone at Lolly's Yogurt Farm," Miss Skates said, drawing stares as she wheeled up the front stairs and across the carpet of a downtown restaurant recently.

"They said no, but they needed someone to pass out leaflets," she said, "so I said yes, if I could do it on roller skates. It came to me at that moment, and it brought in a lot of business." At the time, she thought $2 an hour plus food was enough to charge. As weeks passed, Miss Skates began to get other jobs: singing at birthdays, delivering flowers to shut-ins, greeting visitors at the airport and other locations, and generally attracting attention to those who wanted it.

Eventually, the street-skater asked Michael Christopher to be her agent and manager, and they raised her price to $5 an hour. Her heroes are Stephen Burrows, the designer; Andy Warhol, the artist, and Roller Rena, who, according to Miss Skates, "skates the streets of New York City all night just for fun, no profit."

Miss Skates avoids skating the steep hills here during a typical 12-hour-day. She began rolling on a skateboard at 9 with "all the neighborhood boys." She says her work is both fun and taxing, especially on her feet — "but my legs never get tired."

Girl's height driving her crazy

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl and I don't care if I ever see my 15th birthday. I am 5 foot 9 and weigh 188 pounds

I hate being taller than all the boys my age. People say, "Wait a few years, they'll grow," but what is a girl suppose to do in the meantime.?

I know I am too fat, but I don't care. I'm so tall I haven't a chance with a boy anyway, so I might as well eat and enjoy myself.

I am so mixed up and have made such a mess of myself, I wish I were dead. Is there any hope for me?

TOO TALL

DEAR TOO TALL: A girl who asks, "Is there any hope for me?" hopes with all her heart that there is. You have two of the most precious gifts in the world — youth and health — and you say you wish you were dead. I don't buy that. Your letter tells me you want to live!

Tell your parents you want to see a doctor for a physical checkup and a sensible diet. Go and heed his advice. It won't be easy, but you can do it if you try hard enough.

Once you've taken off that excess weight, you'll have a new respect for yourself and like yourself better. And I promise you that you'll be well on the road to enjoying life and living it more fully.

DEAR ABBY: My cousin (I'll call her "Carol") is being married soon, and because of financial circumstances, she has invited only the members of her immediate family to the wedding. (Since cousins are not considered "immediate family," I am not invited.)

Carol hinted to me that I should give her a bridal shower and invite all her friends.

Would it be proper to ask girls to a shower that are not invited to the wedding?

CAROL'S COUSIN

DEAR COUSIN: Nowhere is it written that everyone who participates in a bridal shower is entitled to an invitation to the wedding. Or because someone "hinted," you have to do her bidding.

DEAR ABBY: I am a clerk-typist in the registrar's office at small midwestern college.

The other day, about half an hour before lunch, the registrar asked me if I would like to have lunch with him.

We went to lunch, he picked up the tab, and I thanked him.

The next day, his secretary took me aside and told me in a very confidential tone that the registrar was mortified when I didn't offer to pay for my own lunch as he had only $10 with him and my lunch came to $3.50! Then the secretary said she was asked to "hint" to me that whenever anyone goes to lunch with the boss, it's "dutch."

I felt humiliated and upset to have been criticized behind my back for a wrong I didn't commit. Am I wrong to assume that when a gentleman asks me to have lunch with him, I am his guest? I thought he would have been insulted had I offered to pay for my own lunch under the circumstances. Please set me straight.

PERTURBED

DEAR PERTURBED: Had you offered to pay for your own lunch, you would not have offended a gentleman, because your boss isn't one. Furthermore, a man who asks his secretary to "hint" to you that all his invitations mean "dutch" is both cheap and gutless. Relax, dear. You committed no wrong.

Don't underestimate value of daydreams

Iowa City, Iowa (UPI) — Americans just don't take time to daydream and their imaginations are suffering as a result of it, a University of Iowa psychologist said.

"Positive fantasies make us feel good about ourselves, add to our personal growth and enrich our capacity for creative work," said Dr. Kathleen Staley, chief staff psychologist for the university counseling service.

"These are reasons enough to make them respectable. So there's no need to feel guilty when you daydream."

Daydreams are on the way out for a couple of reasons, she said. They've gotten "bad press" because people believe them to be a waste of time and because of the bombardment of factual information and "canned fantasy."

"When we watch a play on television, we don't have to imagine what the characters look like as we do when we read a novel," she said.

Opening lead - six of spades.

Assume you're in six spades and West leads a trump. You win with the jack, cash the A-K of diamonds, ruff a dianond and play three more rounds of trumps, discarding two hearts from dummy.

You next play a heart to the king, losing to the ace, and ruff East's heart return. You now have four clubs in each hand and your only concern is whether one opponent has four to the jack. In that case the jack can still be trapped by a finesse, but, unfortunately, you don't know which defender has the assumed four clubs. If you knew this, you could assure four club tricks.

The defenders haven't helped you much during the play. As you were leading your trumps, West discarded a diamond and a heart, while East discarded a heart.

There is no positive indication whether to play the A-Q of clubs to trap West's jack, if he has it, or whether to play the A-K and so trap East's jack if he has it. Superficially, there seems to be nothing to guide you, but if you go back to the bidding and opening lead you uncover a clue.

You start by assuming that West knows you're missing an ace. North's five club response to Blackwood denied an ace, and you, as declarer, can't have all four aces since you wouldn't have used Blackwood just to hear partner tell you he has no aces. It follows logically that you have three aces for your six spade bid.

West is therefore unlikely to have a singleton club, because he almost surely would have led it, hoping to find his partner with either the ace of clubs or ace of spades. On this line of reasoning, you should cash the A-Q of clubs in preference ot the A-K, and then take the proven finesse.

Senior club not interested in constructive work

Life Begins At Forty

By Joanne Farris

DEAR JOANNE FARRIS: I joined a local senior club about five years ago, but I have now dropped out. I discovered they weren't interested in "do-good" activities; they just wanted to be entertained.

I happen to be the kind of person who needs to feel useful, so I want some ideas for forming a group for service. Any suggestions?

Signed: J. K., Harlingen, Tex.

ANSWER: There are all kinds of volunteer service groups ranging from Laubach Literacy Centers which teach reading and writing to unlettered adults, through library volunteers who take books to shut-ins and often read to them, to the Seagulls, who visit and help old persons who are lonely. I've written about a lot of them in previous columns.

Fish is a fantastic organization that came to my attention this summer. Fish is the symbol of brotherly love. The Fish organization is an interdenominational group of church volunteers who show their brotherly love through their service to Fish.

What do they do? They offer emergency help of all kinds to persons and families that need it. Sometimes it's a family going through town who have run out of gas. Fish can give them gas money. Another time, it's an old or disabled person whose food stamps have been stolen. Fish can help out with food supplies until the local welfare department can handle the problem, usually in five days.

Fish has the capability to provide food, clothing, temporary lodging, prescriptions, gas, etc., to those in sudden, extreme need. They receive frequent requests for assistance from local social service agencies who are not geared to give this emergency assistance.

How do they do this? They maintain food and clothing cupboards of donated goods. A local church provides the storage space.

Volunteers provide standby phones service 12 hours a day to handle requests for aid. The on-call volunteer commits himself or herself to be available by phone between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. one or more days a month. Sometimes two volunteers will split a shift and handle it on the split basis every week. An answering service receives the calls and channels them to the on-duty volunteer, who then refers the caller to the persons who can handle the specific request.

Many of the Fish workers are older persons who have time to give. Fish in every city needs more volunteers than it has, and the Fish persons I talked to reported that they do not have many men working.

Fish does not solicit funds, but they accept cash donations which they use to buy whatever the cupboards need, at wholesale. Additionally, cash is used for prescription purchases and gas or other emergency items which the cupboards do not stock.

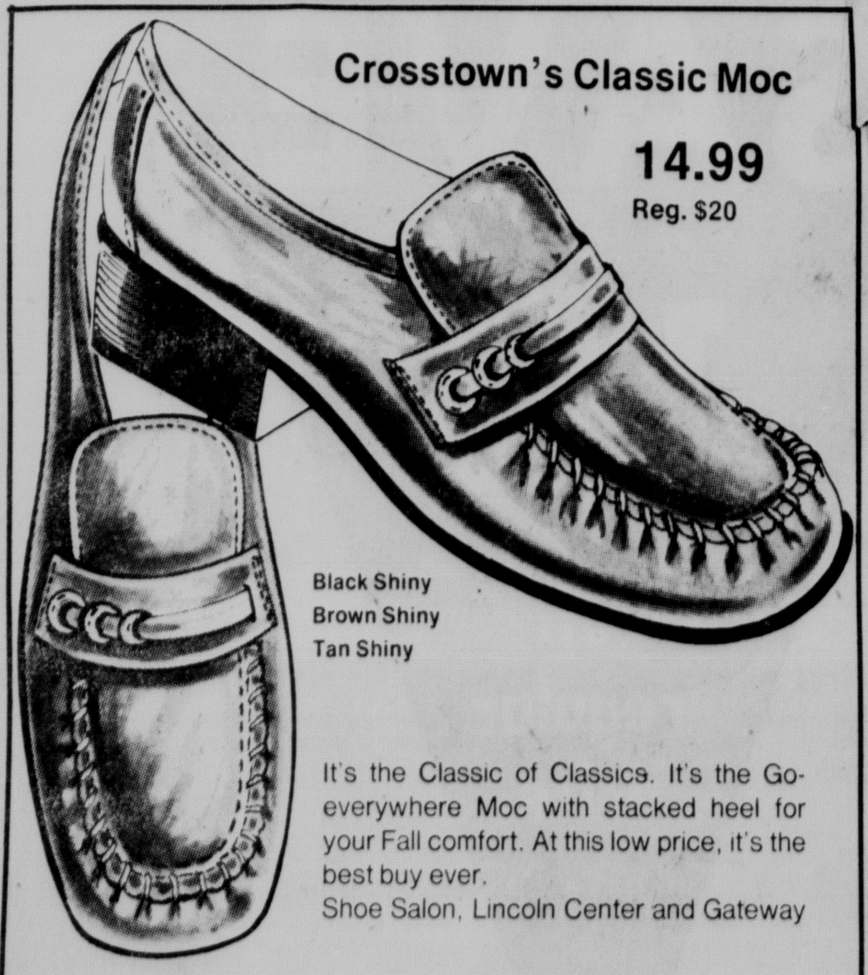

Each church that belongs to Fish contributes $5 a month. Other community organizations, such as the Retired Teachers Association, commit themselves to a monthly support donation. The Retired Teachers, for instance, averaged $30 a month for Fish last year in one town.

Fish started in England in the 1960s. Now it is worldwide. There are over 1,000 Fish groups in the United States alone.

The Fish emergency assistance policy is to give all needed aid for two or three days until the problem is solved or a social work agency can take over. The liaison between the Fish Executive Committee and the local social workers is good and close.

If you'd like further information about Fish, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Joanne Farris, in care of this newspaper. I will see that you get the latest Fish bulletins from one of the active groups with which I have contact.

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — A little rain blew over the Pacific Coast. The dachshund pattered in with muddy feet. The paper came this wet morning in a plastic envelope. We have high hopes for a stormy winter.

Opened the paper to the latest hi-de-ho on the CIA, the secret U.S. organization — which has become about as secret as "Charlie's Angels."

How come the CIA didn't let me into those hush-hush experiments in that sexy San Francisco apartment? Give me a few mind bender pills? Cut me out a paper doll to call my own?

(I only lived a few blocks away. I could have walked over.)

I said to the dachshund: "Don't we ordinary fellows have equal rights too?"

The mail person arrives in her red-white-and-blue cart. "You are invited to a reception honoring etc. R.S.V.P."

I get those occasionally from consul generals. They honor some honroably titled fellow who's in the U.S. drumming up trade for his nation's products.

"Black tie." That means they'll have caviar on little rings of toast. Otherwise it would be smoked salmon and a slice of lemon. Not many secrets you can keep from a trained observer of the reception route.

Question these days is whether they have one-way mirrors. Are you being secretly photographed as you dry your hands on the towel with the consular insignia?

☆ ☆ ☆

Happy birthday! We have a birthday today. I shouted down the stairs: "Come up here and pick up your clothes! You're 14-years-old!"

My own birthday comes a week later.

He wants everybody to know about his birthday. I am trying to keep mine a secret.

On the phone: "Yep, it's my birthday. Yep, 14! But guess how old my Dad's going to be! He's going to —."

I said: "Shut up and put down that phone! I'm expecting a long distance call."

☆ ☆ ☆

Much of the morning mail is addressed to "Occupant." (It seems to be a well-kept secret who lives here.)

Writers wait anxiously for mail. A psyche bloke at some Eastern University says: "Writers develop inner doubts and uncertainties for lack of feedback. The actor, the singer, hear the ring of audience applause and are reassured.

"The writer performs and is met by silence."

☆ ☆ ☆

This is true. And I've risen from the typewriter and put on a record just to hear some noise. "Pardon me, boys, is this the Chattanooga choo-choo?"

Mail is the writer's feedback. The mail person bears our fortunes in the red-white-and-blue cart.

"Sir: Your appalling lack of knowledge on the subject of etc."

☆ ☆ ☆

We develop one-way mirror tricks to photograph the silent audience. We "gild the lily." Immediately dozens of people seize their pens. Let you know that Will Shakespeare wrote "paint the lily — you idiot."

Mention cats. Cat lovers and cat haters attack. The mail person staggers to the door with bundles of letters. Thank God for cats.

I said to the dachshund: "How about a big hand for this lad?" She thumped her tail on the floor. A dog with literary taste.

Factory outlets good source of Christmas gifts

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — If you've never shopped the factory outlets, look them over before you start your Christmas shopping. Outlet stores have their drawbacks, but their reward is a retail price for top-name items — 30 to 90% lower than at department stores.

First the drawbacks: You may have to drive some distance (although there are often outlets closer to home than you realize); there are usually no charge accounts, and some places won't even accept checks; it may take several trips to the same store before you can sort efficiently through all the goods jammed on pipe racks or piled on counters; if there's a dressing room at all, it may be one room shared by everyone; some stores won't make exchanges, and hardly any will refund your money; there are no salesmen to answer questions; normally, you can't have goods delivered.

Now the advantages: Price, Price, Price. Whether you are buying clothes, luggage, furniture, linens, appliances, china, shoes, you name it, outlet stores can double your purchasing power. By shopping the outlets, you nullify the effects of several years of inflation.

The true "factory outlet" is located at or near the manufacturing premises of a particular company (although a few companies also maintain stores in other parts of the country). The manufacturer uses the store to move "irregulars" (goods with flaws so minor you may not even find them); "seconds" (with more serious flaws); popular lines that were overproduced; unpopular lines that sold slowly; and th tag ends of discontinued lines. Sometimes, business at the outlet gets so good that the manufacturer deliberately overproduces, to supply the outlet store with goods. The advantage of buying from a particular manufacturer's outlet is that you're sure of the brand name and know the quality.

Then there are independent outlets that sell the overstock of many different manufacturers, often with the brand name removed. Sometimes branded items are stamped "irregular" even though they're not, so as not to rile local department stores that sell the same goods at a higher price.

True factory-outlet merchandise is top quality, sold at a true bargain price. By contrast, conventional discount stores often deal with lower-quality merchandise.

Because of the tremendous increase in business in recent years, some outlet stores have added more conveniences. This has sometimes raised prices a little, but has also made the stores more attractive to patronize.

Some of the recent additions to service, at some stores, are Sunday openings; the acceptance of credit cards or personal checks; play areas for children, so mothers can shop undisturbed; and the right to return merchandise for exchange — especially men's clothing, since women generally do the shopping for their husbands and sons.

One warning: Keep an eagle eye out for quality. Originally, factory outlets sold only name brands at big savings. But as the stores have become more popular, some have expanded beyond what top-quality manufacturers can supply. As a result, they've started to include some lower-quality merchandise, the kind you'll find at regular discount stores.

The only things that mak factory outlet stores worth the trip are the big savings on name-brand items.

If any factory outlet guides have been published for your area, you should find them in a local bookstore. A nationwide guide is the SOS Directory, $5 for the new edition, available in November from P.O. Box 10482, Jacksonville, Fla. 32207. Regional guides include the Factory Store Guide to All New England, $3.50 from Pequot Press, Chester, Conn. 06412; and the Underground Shoppers, from P.O. Box 34212, Dallas, Tex. 75234, covering Dallas ($3.60), Houston ($2.45), St. Louis, ($2.45), Boston ($3), Southeast Florida ($2.45), Tulsa ($3.60), and Atlanta ($3.60); Factory Outlet Shopping Guides, P.O. Box 239W, Oradell, N.J. 07649 — for New England, New York City, New Jersey, Pa., North and South Carolina, or Washington, D.C., $3.25 each.

The Staffer

By Ken Hambleton

This isn't an editorial for or against the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit on our highways, but Americans are certainly missing a lot with the restricted speed.

Travelling the length of Germany, from the North Sea to the southern tip of Bavaria and into Austria, by way of the famous Autobahn, can, and almost did, provide all the thrills of a trainwreck.

The U.S. Interstate system was patterned after the German Autobahn and for many years provided us the adventure the Germans had been enjoying for a long time.

But while the U.S. has limited speed, the West German government permits drivers to proceed as quickly as they wish.

Right there you know you're going to have fun.

What's even more exciting is the fact the speedometers are in kilometers, rather than miles, so when you're doing 70 m.p.h. the gauge reads 112 k.p.h.

We left Jever, a small town that has to be reclaimed from the sea after each big storm, about 5 a.m. and never figured that a drive would be so much fun.

My wife, Ryly, and Guenther Kruse (whose parents live in Jever) with his wife Sabine, were getting settled into the lull of a 400-mile trip on the Autobahn.

After stopping for coffee at a rastplatz (rest stop), where we paid about 60 cents a cup, it appeared as though the trip would involve some sightseeing and not much excitement.

But as we passed Munich there was a large fire with at least 20 fire trucks near the flughaven (airport) which kind of put us on edge.

An hour later, or 140 kilometers down the road, we came upon some stopped trucks in the right lane and slowly went past as traffic slowed from its frantic pace to nothing.

On the other side of a parked beer truck, we saw a Volkswagen smashed up against a guard rail and an injured person, who had been thrown from the car when it hit the guard rail.

Almost immediately a German polizist (policeman) came roaring up to the scene on his motorcycle. Two krankenwagens (ambulances) followed.

But nobody could seem to help the injured man on the ground so 10 minutes later a helicopter landed next to the Autobahn and took the victim away.

Soon we entered the foothills of the Alps; the scenery did a lot to help calm all of us down.

But another hour down the road, another polizist came roaring by in a Mercedes-Benz, passing us as if we were standing still. We figured he was just after somebody.

Wrong.

Over the next rise, smack in the middle of the left lane, was a single engine airplane that had landed there because the plane had run out of gas.

Travel by train isn't as exciting as travelling by car, but offers a different type of adventure.

After hours of study that helped produce three sentences in German that would help us obtain tickets to take a train from Salzburg, Austria, to Saarbrucken (in Saarland, West Germany) it seemed that we had the language all figured out.

Well two readings of my three-line message failed to gain any response except confusion from the ticketman. Finally he said, "What is it you're trying to say." In English!

Many of the people in Germany learn English in school and almost all of the public servants, policemen, train ticket salesmen and bus drivers speak some English.

Differences between the Germans and Americans aren't too great when it comes to daily life.

One big difference, besides language and the castles and churches that date back hundreds of years, is the East German border.

All the reading about communism and the border between the two Germanies didn't become real until actually seeing the 200-yards of "frontier" wasteland.

A diagram on the location explains about the automatic machine guns posted about every 20 yards along the fence. East German soldiers in the bunker across the frontier with machine guns and a 100-foot-tall lookout post makes the whole situation very real and very unsettling.

It would be hard to explain how good it felt to be walking back towards the west and yet how said it was knowing the people, just 200 yards away, couldn't do the same.

Lash winner of book award

New York — The first $5,000 Samuel Eliot Morison Award was presented to Joseph P. Lash for his book, "Roosevelt and Churchill — 1939-1941 — The Partnership That Saved the West."

Lash, a former newspaperman, was presented the award by Henry A. Kissinger, the former secretary of state and himself a historian.

The Morison award, established by American Heritage Publishing Co., will annually honor an American author whose work shows "that good history is literature as well as high scholarship."

Harrison almost missed getting role.

'Logan's Run' is more than 'Star Wars' copy

Los Angeles (AP) — If television viewers detect any resemblance between "Star Wars" and the new CBS series "Logan's Run," the producers will be delighted.

Not that Ivan Goff and Ben Roberts set out to make an imitation of the film world's biggest hit. They would be quick to point out that the movie on which the series was based predates "Star Wars" by two years. And the pilot film for the series was completed before anyone had seen the George Lucas film.

"I reserved my opinion at first, but now I'm very hopeful about the series," says its star, 27-year-old Gregory Harrison. "I saw the first show, a 90-minute version, and I think it compares favorably in appearance, even though 'Star Wars' cost something like $10 million and we've got a television budget.

"But I think the people who liked 'Star Wars' will like 'Logan's Run.' It has the same sense of fun, of idealism and discovery. And you can sit at home and enjoy it free, not stand in line and pay $3.50."

He applauded CBS's courage in buying the series before the release of "Star Wars" — "at a time when science fiction was bombing in television." He cited the failures of "Planet of the Apes" and "Fantastic Journey."

Greg Harrison almost didn't make the "Run." MGM had issued a call for a young leading man to play Logan, and Harrison's agent told him to drop by the studio for an interview. He surprised the casting agent by appearing in a beard; he explained he had grown it for an ABC television movie, "The Gathering," to start Dec. 6.

"Too bad," the casting agent said. "That's when we're shooting our pilot."

Harrison figured as long as he had made the trip from Studio City to Culver City, he might as well meet the film makers. Producer Goff and director Robert Day liked his manner and asked him to test for Logan, in spite of the time conflict.

"I had screen tested seven times and never gotten the roles," the actor remarked. "Maybe the reason I did well on the 'Logan's Run' test is because I didn't believe I would be able to play the part."

For a while, it didn't seem that he could. MGM wanted to sign him, the makers of "The Gathering" threatened suit. It looked as though only the lawyers would win, then suddenly both companies shifted schedules so Harrison could appear in both films.

If "Logan's Run" makes it, Gregory Harrison is liable to make it big. He is an attractive figure: tall, athletic, with strong features and large, expressive eyes. He may well be the first star to emerge from Catalina Island.

Harrison spent his boyhood on that quiet (except in the summer months), mountainous island 24 miles off Los Angeles. His family has lived there since the turn of the century, both his grandfather and father having operated the glass-bottom boat.

"I loved growing up there; I can't imagine a better place for a boy," Harrison said. "There is no smog, no traffic, little crime — the worst is usually a brick thrown through a window.

"I graduated from high school in a class of 30, 28 of whom I had known since kindergarten. I hiked all over the island, swam alone, learned to be independent, which is a great thing for a kid."

Struggling artists given helping hand

Brooklyn, Conn. (AP) — Henry Riseman's chicken farm is dead. Vast fields that once were fertile have gone to seed.

But rising out of the remains of the once prosperous farming business is something that excites Riseman more than agriculture.

The 63-year-old farmer is cultivating young artists who have not yet reached fruition.

The pre-Revolutionary War farm has become the New England Center for Contemporary Art, a haven and showplace in green northwestern Connecticut for sculptors, painters and other artists struggling to win notice.

"This is a growing thing that will go on forever," said its dungaree-clad creator as he showed a visitor through the 1751 farmhouse and the gallery-barn he is converting into studios and apartments for resident artists.

During its first 14 months, the nonprofit center has been a working home for a dozen artists, including Soviet dissident Dano Basasachivili, Milwaukee-born sculptor Richard D. Graham and sculptor Suzanne Stanley, who also is the center's assistant director.

Artist exchanges are being arranged with Great Britain, the Netherlands, Italy, Indonesia and Israel.

The "work ethic" infuses all activity at the center, from communal carpentry on renovated buildings to chopping of the wood on the 200-acre farm to heat the center in winter.

Riseman said the art venture owes much to his wife of 18 years, Marion Schaefer, a painter whose awards include a prize at the International Women's Art Festival show in New York City in 1975.

The 1975 sale of her extensive collection of Tiffany glass provided seed money from which the center grew.

One of the center's shows symbolized Riseman's efforts to give a helping hand to young artists. Titled "Brooklyn to Brooklyn," it presented works of 20 painters from this community's New York borough namesake.

Word of the center has spread, and today a steady flow of inquiries comes from artists wanting to live there or exhibit their work in the "barn."

They were selected by dancers at a festival last weekend.

The Hall of Fame now numbers 20 and is headquartered at the Col Ballroom.

NBC changes news presidents

New York (UPI) — NBC switched news presidents Wednesday, naming Lester Crystal to replace Richard C. Wald, who resigned. Network executives said the move was part of a drive to improve news and sports reporting.

It was the second shakeup in network news chiefs in the past four months.

The NBC change, rumored earlier in the week, was disclosed at a luncheon at which Crystal replaced Wald on the program. Also present were CBS News President Richard S. Salant and ABC News President Roone Arledge.

Herbert S. Schlosser, president and chief executive officer of NBC, said later in a telephone interview that the network planned to increase its news, sports and "Today" show staffs. He also said one area Crystal would investigate was finding an NBC competitor for CBS' successful "60 Minutes."

The word that NBC will add staff came at a time when the network is considering sizeable layoffs among its 6,500 employes.

"There is no magic number," Schlosser said of the layoffs, adding that they were in the process of being determined. He specified only that they would be less than the 300 reported by a New York newspaper.

"In a large company such as this over the years there has been some duplication. Now it is going to be a trimmer, leaner company. We are not laying off an enormous number, and nothing on the air will be affected by it."

To underline the streamlining nature of the proposed layoffs, he said, "We expect this to be a record year for NBC. Last year was a record year, and so was the year before."

As for the more than $100 million the network is spending on the Moscow Olympics, he said "Olympics sales were excellent and we expect them to be profitable."

The rumors that heralded the NBC switch in news presidents held Schlosser to be dissatisfied with Wald over a long series of events, ranging from Barbara Walters' move to ABC to the fact that NBC has not been catching up with the top-rated "CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite," while ABC News under Roone Arledge was expected to make competition for the network news audience even tougher.

"It has nothing to do with Barbara Walters — that's ancient history," Schlosser said, "and her leaving hasn't hurt NBC or the news division."

On the subject of competition — with the Cronkite news, "60 Seconds" and other developments — Schlosser said NBC was putting "new resources" into those areas.

Crystal, who only last July 1 was named executive vice president, NBC Television News, said he was under no deadline for improving NBC ratings n the nightly network news rivalry.

"There is no timetable," he said. "We're concerned with coverage and the best results in delivering content."

Brisbane Australia (UPI) — Tourists are flocking to the tea plantation operated by Tea Estates of Australia at Nerada in north Queensland.

For an admission fee of $1, the visitor is given a guided tour of the plantation and treatment plant, then served light refreshments.

Tour operators throughout Queensland are now including the tea plantation in their programs.

Savalas won't be on stand

Miami (UPI) — Attorney Ellis Rubin, apparently fearing problems with getting Telly Savalas' testimony admitted, decided Wednesday not to call the actor to testify in the "TV intoxication" murder trial of 15-year-old Ronny Zamora.

Rubin had subpoenaed Savalas and told the jury last week a particular episode of his television series, "Kojak," may have influenced Zamora when he killed an elderly neighbor June 4.

Rubin said he was releasing Savalas from the subpoena because of a ruling Tuesday by Circuit Judge Paul Baker.

The judge refused testimony from a psychologist who had studied the effects of television violence on youngsters, but who had not interviewed Zamora. Baker had told Rubin before the trial he would only allow testimony on how television affected Zamora, not all children.

Rubin said because Savalas had not interviewed Zamora and has no firsthand knowledge of studies linking television violence to a murder or any other specific crime, he would not call the actor.

Rubin contends Zamora was under the influence of "involuntary subliminal television intoxication" when he killed 82-year-old Elinor Haggart after she caught the boy ransacking her house.

Another psychologist testified Wednesday she believed Zamora met part of the test to determine legal insanity.

"I believe that he did not know the nature and consequences of his acts," Helen Ackerman said.

The psychologist said Zamora had a "suicidal predisposition" and was capable of "erratic and unpredictable" behavior.

But the judge refused to allow the introduction of a study showing that sociopathic youngsters who watch large amounts of television violence are likely to be high risk.

History favors Royals after win

New York (AP) — History was on the side of the Kansas City Royals after they rode home runs by Hal McRae, John Mayberry and Al Cowens to a 7-2 victory over the New York Yankees in Wednesday's opening game of the American League championship playoffs.

Only once since the league playoff series began in 1969 has a visiting team won the opening game of the playoffs and not continued on to take the series and the pennant. That happened in 1974 when Baltimore won the opener at Oakland but dropped the next three games to the A's.

Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog knew exactly how much the opening-game victory meant to his club.

"It gives us a one-game lead, that's all," he said.

But the Royals know that after Thursday night's second game, they return to their ballpark and their record at home was 38-7 over the last three months of the season.

"We're two good ballclubs and we're equally capable of winning in each other's parks," said Herzog.

But if the Yankees are to come back, they may have to do it without Don Gullett, Wednesday's starter, who left after two innings with arm problems.

"His arm's not very good right now," said Yankees Manager Billy Martin. "He told me after the second inning that it was bothering him."

"I just couldn't get loose," said Gullett. "I didn't feel good in the bullpen but I didn't tell Billy. I didn't have much velocity. When you have a bad arm, you can't control the ball. I thought it would loosen up, but it didn't."

The Royals treated Gullett, the Yankees' $2 million free agent pickup, roughly. He surrendered McRae's home run in the first inning and a two-run double by little Freddie Patek in the second.

Mayberry and Cowens both connected against reliever Dick Tidrow, and left-hander Paul Splittorff rode the heavy support to an easy victory.

"I had good control today with a good fastball and slider," said Splittorff. "I was really up for this one."

The Yankees, however, were not, and never recovered after spotting the Royals six runs in the first three innings.

The home runs by McRae and Mayberry were two-run shots, while Cowens tagged a solo homer. Thurman Munson accounted for the Yankees scoring with a third-inning homer.

The Royals wasted no time against Gullett, whose 14-4 record during the regular season gave him the best winning percentage in the American League.

Patek, leading off the game, walked on four pitches, and when Gullett's first pitch to McRae also was a ball, Manager Billy Martin paid a hasty visit to the pitcher. Gullett got strikes on his next two pitches, but then McRae got all of the next one, sending it over the 387-foot sign in left field for a quick 2-0 lead.

Gullett retired the first two batters in the second inning, but then was in trouble again because of a walk. He walked Darrell Porter, and the Royals' catcher slid safely into second when Frank White's infield single backed up Graig Nettles and the Yankee third baseman's throw to second was a bit late.

Baker grand slam powers Los Angeles

Los Angeles (UPI) — There's an old Hollywood axiom that if the script doesn't work completely the first time, try it again before a new audience and test the results.

That idea worked perfectly for the Los Angeles Dodgers Wednesday night when Dusty Baker stole a page from teammate Ron Cey's script and belted a grand slam homer which led the Dodgers to a 7-1 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies and evened their National League championship series at one game apiece.

After a travel day Thursday, the best-of-five series switches to Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium for the third game Friday night. The Phillies, however, must still be regarded as having the upper hand, since they won 60 of their 81 games played at home this year.

Less than 24 hours earlier, Cey had made baseball history by becoming the first player ever to hit a grand slam in NL playoff competition, but that went for nothing as the Phillies rallied for two runs in the ninth to win 7-5.

This time things worked differently. Baker's homer, which came off Jim Lonborg, put the Dodgers ahead 5-1 and that was all they needed because Don Sutton lived up to his reputation as one of baseball's top "money" pitchers.

Sutton, who was unlucky this year in compiling a 14-8 mark, was tagged for nine hits but only one — a solo homer by Bake McBride in the third inning — did any damage as he posted his third victory without a loss in playoff competition.

"I just think it's more fun to pitch with something like this on the line," said Sutton. "I enjoy it a lot more. I believe pressure is an individual thing.

"I got a call this morning from somebody who asked me if I felt tense. Well, holy cow, if they beat our best pitcher last night (Tommy John), what good would it do for me to worry about it all day?"

"This was the Don Sutton tonight that we've seen so many times," said Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda. "He knew we had to have this one and he was ready. He had great command of his pitches."

The Dodgers, guilty of several fundamental mistakes Tuesday night, played a virtually flawless game defensively in Game 2. But the Phillies had their strategy backfire twice and it cost them five runs.

The intentional walk — that "book strategy" which so many managers employ — was the culprit. The first time the Phillies used it was in the fourth when Lonborg, after discussing the matter with Manager Danny Ozark, elected to walk Steve Garvey intentionally to load the bases and pitch to Baker. Singles by Bill Russell and Reggie Smith and a sacrifice bunt by Cey preceded the walk to Garvey and Baker promptly slammed a 1-2 pitch on a low line into the left field pavilion to give the Dodgers a 5-1 lead.

Dropout, injuries hit NU's footballers

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

Thanks to one dropout and a couple of injuries, Nebraska's football ranks thinned a bit Wednesday.

Keith Steward, who was a starter at one time this young football season but who had been running as the team's No. 3 fullback recently, has apparently decided to end his Cornhusker career.

Steward, a junior walkon from Steubenville, Ohio who started in the Huskers' victory over Alabama, has not shown up for practice since Sunday, according to Coach Tom Osborne.

"I assume he (Steward) has quit," Osborne said of Steward, who has gained 47 yards on 15 attempts this year. "I haven't talked to him but I'd like too."

A 5-11, 210-pounder, Steward lost his starting job to Monte Anthony and had been running with freshman Andre Franklin on the No. 3 unit behind backup fullback Dodie Donnell.

"The thing that bugs me about some of these guys quiting is all the publicity," said Osborne, who cited the stories that accompanied wingback Earl Everett's departure from the team two weeks ago.

"But I'm sure they have other reasons beside getting some publicity. I'm just sorry he quit."

Noting that Steward was at best third-string, Osborne said, "we had a decision to make on whether to take him or Franklin to Kansas State. I guess we don't have to worry about that now."

More pressing on Osborne's mind was a number of injuries including the team's top two middle guards, Kerry Weinmaster and Jeff Pullen.

Pullen suffered a knee strain midway through the two-hour drill while his sidekick, Weinmaster, acquired what appeared to be a severe ankle twist on the final play of the afternoon.

"He has a bit of a cronic ankle sprain," Osborne said of Weinmaster, who is slated to start Saturday against K-State.

Defensive line Coach Charlie McBride said, "I don't know, it looks like Kerry could be out for a while. It's hard to say."

McBride sent defensive tackle Bill Barnett in early. Barnett is still nursing a tender leg. "If he (Barnett) had to play he could," McBride said of Barnett. "But it's pretty sore."

Linebacker and co-captain Jeff Carpenter worked out only in sweat clothes Wednesday. Carpenter is resting some bruised ribs.

"If I can go tomorrow (Thursday) I'll make the trip," Carpenter said.

I-back Rick Berns, who sat out Saturday's game because of a hip pointer, was running almost at top speed and Osborne indicated Berns would make the trip to K-State.

The Husker coach said reserve defensive back Darrell Walton (knee strain) has definitely been ruled out this weekend. Quarterback Jeff Quinn (leg) is also highly questionable.

Walton's spot has been filled by Paul Letcher, a walkon junior from Lincoln Northeast. Ed Burns will be the third Nebraska quarterback on the traveling roster, replacing Quinn.

Starting offensive guard Steve Lindquist was back in pads Wednesday, but was still slowed by a sore leg. Osborne said if Lindquist is unable to start against the Wildcats, senior Brett Moritz would get the opening nod.

Because of all the questionable injuries, Osborne was having trouble picking his 55-man traveling roster for Nebraska's first road game of the season.

"We made out a tentative one this morning," he said. "But we will have to wait until Thursday afternoon and see how the injuries are coming along before we can make some final decisions."

Osborne said the traveling squad breakdown would include: three centers, four offensive guards and tackle, two split ends, three tight ends, three wingbacks, three fullbacks, three I-backs and three quarterbacks. On defense, he said most positions would be two-deep. He also will take two kickers, Billy Todd and Dean Sukup.

With reserve split end Jeff Lee also working out in sweats Wednesday because of leg injuries, Osborne said wingback Kenny Brown has been alternating at wingback and split end.

The Husker coach also pointed out that Franklin and Tim Wurth can play both I-back and fullback and Lawrence Cooley can play both offensive guards spots which adds versatility to the traveling roster.

Columbus fans invading Wahoo

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

It's liable to be bumper-to-bumper traffic in Wahoo Friday night.

Not one, but two Columbus football teams are invading Saunders County.

The big shootout will be at Neumann's stadium. The Cavaliers, rated sixth in Class C-1, host Columbus Scotus, Class B's fifth-rated outfit.

Both own four-game winning streaks since respective season-opening losses to Milford and Schuyler.

The Centennial Conference scrap carries more prestige than the Columbus Lakeview at Wahoo High game on the other side of town Friday night.

Lakeview has lost four straight since winning the season opener and Wahoo is still trying to find that first victory for coach Dick Tingelhoff.

A win over Lakeview could erase two seasons of frustration for Tingelhoff. He took a 62-20 career record from Scribner to Wahoo last season and finished 0-9. The losing streak now stands at 14 games.

Lakeview, the school producing the famous Pillen brothers (Clete and Jim), isn't enamored with losing either.

So, despite the lesser records, both schools are hoping for an equal number of No. 10 (Platte) and No. 6 (Saunders) County license plates in the parking lot.

Grand Island and Hastings also will be busy football crossroads Friday night with a pair of games in each community.

Top-ranked Lincoln Southeast plays at fifth-ranked Grand Island in Class A's feature matchup of the weekend. It's not the only game in town though.

Grand Island Northwest plays at Grand Island Central Catholic. The matchup does not offer ratings impact, but there is more than the usual pride at stake.

Hastings Adams Central, Class B's seventh-ranked team, entertains Omaha Cathedral Friday night while Class A neighbor Hastings High hosts Columbus in an East Big 10 battle.

None, however, will approach the crowd expected to jam Seacrest Field Friday night for the East-Northeast intra-city bash.

The Rockets will treat a homecoming crowd to a 5-0 record and No. 3 rating. East stands 3-2 with an explosive offense itching to inflict some damage to a defense owning four shutouts.

If series history is considered, expect the difference to be a touchdown or less. Disregarding a 47-0 East win and even a 13-0 Northeast win, the games have been decided by seven points or less.

East owns a 4-3-2 edge in the heated rivalry, having won 15-14 in '69, 47-0 in '71, 6-0 in '73 and 10-7 in '74. Northeast wins came in '68 (13-0), '70 (12-7) and '76 (7-0). A 7-7 tie in '72 was the only blemish on either team's record during co-state championship seasons. The two also deadlocked, 7-7, two years ago.

Since form charts are usually deceiving, East offers excellent upset possibilities. The Spartans need the win more desperately to climb back into the playoff picture.

In games involving Lincoln teams, it's:

Lincoln Pius X (4-0) at Omaha Holy Name (0-5), Thursday night — This shouldn't be much problem for the second-ranked 'Bolts. Next week against Lexington will be a different story.

Lincoln East (3-2) vs. Lincoln Northeast (5-0), Friday night, Seacrest Field — A fan couldn't ask for a more interesting faceoff. East is high-scoring, above average on defense. Northeast is stingy, above average on offense. It's strength versus strength and the guess is the Spartans will be the second of six teams to reach the Rocket end zone. To pull off the upset, though, it'll have to happen more than once.

Lincoln Southeast (4-0) at Grand Island (4-1), Friday night — A win over the top-ranked Knights would make the fifth-ranked Islanders 3-for-3 against Lincoln schools this season. The odds are against it.

Fremont (4-1) vs. Lincoln High (2-3), Saturday night, Seacrest Field — A Lincoln High win could change the course of its season. Fremont won't be looking past the Links.

Trout fishing improves at Lake Mac

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint

Ogallala — Lake McConaughy once was known for trophy-sized rainbow trout. That was before the incident.

The incident, of course, was the famous fish kill of Nine Mile Creek, one of the important spawning streams for the Big Mac rainbow. Fish move into the stream each fall through the following spring to spawn and replenish Big Mac's trout population.

Several years ago, as the story goes, a few men from that western section of the state decided to have a fish fry. They proceeded to put a fish-killing chemical in Nine Mile and harvested untold pounds of adult spawning trout.

Naturally, the fish kill wiped out a sizable number of trout already in the stream. It also killed the unborn spawn, thus taking a bite out of Big Mac's trout numbers. The result was two or three years of subpar trout fishing and boatloads of unhappy Big Mac trout fishermen.

This year, however, trout fishing started picking up again. Fish are being caught with better frequency and once again, the size is worth bragging about.

The Game and Parks Commission is trying to help the situation along. A section of Nine Mile will be closed to fishing from Oct. 1 to Dec. 30. That's the peak of the spawning run so the fish will be able to spawn unharrassed this year.

The commission is also leasing a portion of another of the lake's major trout streams. Otter Creek is one of those very private streams the lunkers make use of for spawning. It is nearly totally off limits to the fishing public.

For those fortunate enough to fish Otter Creek or Nine Mile or any of the other streams, the trout fishing is as good as you'd find anywhere in the country. Big Mac rates the same.

Another potential trout fishery coming up is the canal system. Annually, the canals are all but shut off when the irrigation season passes. Once the Sutherland Power Plant is completed, rumors have it the canals will continue to flow, thus preventing the annual killoff of trout and other good game fish which make frequent use of the manmade river each summer.

Missouri waterfowl

Missouri River waterfowl hunters will be pleased to note the river should be relatively stable for the next six weeks. That report comes from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the river's stabilizers in control of water release from the Gavins Point Reservoir at Lewis and Clark Lake.

There have been years waterfowlers no more than set in their blinds than the Corps would let out the water and flood the spots. Rainfall a couple of years ago did the same thing to Platte River hunters just before the season opened. The Corps said, barring unusual rainfalls, the situation should be good this year.

Olive Creek Reservoir near Kramer this weekend will become the home of some 400 Lincoln area Boy Scouts, according to the Game and Parks Commission. The scout's fall Camporee Silloree will include setting up camp Friday night with Saturday set for competitions on knot tying, canoeing, axemanship, fishing, cooking, orienteering, flapjack flipping and other skills for outdoorsmen. Sounds like a fun weekend for area scouts.

The Nebraska Wildlife Federation has announced Dr. Berton L. Lamb, legal and institutional affairs specialist for the Cooperative Instream Flow Services Group of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, will be the featured speaker at the Saturday public conference on streamflow protection. The one-day conference is being held in the Columbus Holiday Inn.

Hannah, Gray back in camp

Foxboro, Mass. (AP) — The New England Patriots' all-pro linemen, Leon Gray and John Hannah, returned to the practice field Wednesday, marking their first appearance in uniform since walking out on the National Football League team nearly a month ago.

Hannah had little to say, but Gray said he was given a warm welcome by his teammates.

"There were lots of smiles, lots of handshaking and lots of arms around each other," Gray said after a two-hour workout.

Patriots Coach Chuck Fairbanks said both Hannah, a guard, and Gray, a tackle, would start Sunday when New England entertains the Seattle Seahawks. During the absence of the two linemen, the Patriots lost two of their first three games by identical 30-27 scores.

Gray said he was at his regular playing weight, and Fairbanks said Hannah was only about three or four pounds heavier than when he left Sept. 11.

As for the walkout, Gray said, "It's history now . . we had a little family dispute."

Football

Wayne State College of Nebraska is ranked 16th this week in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics' Division II football poll. Westminster, Pa. remains the leader with a 4-0-0 season record.

Former Oklahoma State and Dallas Cowboy fullback Walt Garrison, is considering a plunge into politics by running for Texas Commission of Agriculture next May.

The Denver Bronocs will make no further effort to trade for New England Patriots' offensive linemen John Hannah or Leon Gray, according to coach Red Miller. Hannah and Gray reported to the Patriot camp Wednesday.

The New England Patriots have traded nose tackle Arthur Moore and placed veteran center Bob Hyland on waivers to make room for returning offensive linemen John Hanna and Leon Gray.

Veteran Pittsburgh Steeler safety Mike Wagner will be placed on the injured reserve list later this week and will be out for the remainder of the 1977 season, the Steelers have announced.

Other sports

Baltimore Orioles' manager Earl Weaver, who kept an unheralded, rookie-laden team in the American League East pennant race until the waning days of the regular season, was named "Manager of the Year" Wednesday by The Sporting News.

Major league umpires have voted not to attend future hearings on appeals by players of decisions made on the diamond and to let "all appeals rise or fall on the (written) reports to the office."

The Toronto Maple Leafs will make the next edition of the Guiness Book of Records, according to the team's publicity director for an attendance record of sellouts in every regular season game since 1946.

Phillies pleased with 1-1 tie

Los Angeles (UPI) — The Philadelphia Phillies were happy to get away with a 1-1 split in their national league playoff series against the Los Angeles Dodgers and seemed supremely confident of winning the pennant in the final three games on their home field.

The Dodgers beat Philadelphia 7-1 in the second game Wednesday night to tie the series.

Greg Luzinski, who got a double in four trips, said flatly, "We've got the best team. It's not one guy who's going to win it. Our team is going to win it. We just play good ball at home. The crowd helps but we've just got a good ball club. I'm satisfied with the split."

Don Sutton went all the way for the Dodger victory and Luzinski said he crossed the Phillies up because he did not throw as many fastballs as he usually does.

"He threw a lot of breaking stuff and spotted his fastball," Luzinski said. "At that, we hit rockets all over the field, but they made some good plays."

Phillies' starter Jim Lonborg, who was the victim of a grand slam home run by Dusty Baker in the fourth, was asked if he was satisfied with his pitching.

"Are you kidding?" he replied. "I made good pitches in the first three innings but I got into trouble in the fourth. I hung a curve ball to Baker."

He also was optimistic about winning the pennant and said, "I think we have a very good chance of winning."

Bake McBride, the Phillies' center fielder, got his team off to a 1-0 lead in the third inning with a homer off Sutton, off what he said was an inside slider. In the seventh, McBride hit the wall trying to field Reggie Smith's shot that went for a triple.

He said he hurt his shoulder and foot but did not expect to be hampered in the remaining games.

"Just as I caught the ball I hit the wall," said McBride. "I was playing to right center and he hit it to right center. I was already on the warning track so I couldn't tell how close I was to the wall."

Phillies' Manager Danny Ozark was asked if he was happy with the split.

"I guess I've got to be now. I feel very confident going home. We have the edge there. It is a different type of crowd in Philadelphia and they work to our advantage."

About Lonborg and the grand slam, he said, "Lonny made two good pitches to Baker and then made one really bad one. It was a slider-curve ball and he got it up. We wanted him to keep the ball down on Baker in hopes of a ground ball because the infield was up."

Asked why the Phillies were so tough at home, he said jokingly, "Maybe it's the home cooking. Seriously, the Astroturf has a lot to do with it — we have a lot of ground ball hitters."

Shortstop Larry Bowa put the home field advantage succinctly when he said, "They can't beat us there."

Hipp 'scares' K-State coach

Manhattan, Kan. (AP) — Kansas State Coach Ellis Rainsberger was impressed when he heard Nebraska's I.M. Hipp gained 254 yards rushing last Saturday against Indiana. He's downright scared now that he has seen Hipp on film.

"He's a back-and-a-half," Rainsberger said Wednesday. "He ran over them, around them, he jumped over people and he ran away from a bunch of them."

Rainsberger is concerned about the emotional state of his team after its 24-21 loss to Mississippi State last week.

"They've been slow bouncing back from a tough loss," he said. "We're a little behind where we'd like to be right now. It will take a great effort for us to compete against a team like Nebraska."

Sooners face depth problem

Norman, Okla. (AP) — Even though the Oklahoma Sooners had a "good practice" Wednesday, Coach Barry Switzer said injuries in the offensive backfield may cause problems Saturday against Texas.

"We are in the worst depth situation at halfback that we have ever been in," Switzer said.

Halfback Billy Sims did not practice Wednesday. He is still bothered by a sore achilles tendon. Backup fullback Jimmie Rogers did practice, but was still bothered by his ankle injury, also.

Starting fullback Kenny King was also working out with the team Wednesday, apparently recovering from a bruised shoulder.

Sophomore halfback Freddie Nixon is "in the infirmary with a fever," Switzer said. "We need warmer weather than this for conditioning. It has always been hot in the Cotton Bowl."

Sore ankle slows Forego

New York (AP) — Forego's bid to surpass Kelso and become thoroughbred racing's first $2 million winner has been thwarted by an ankle problem, at least for the remainder of this year.

The three-time Horse of the Year was scratched from last Saturday's Marlboro Cup after poor workout and it developed that he had a swelling and heat in the left front ankle.

"The good Lord willing, we are hopeful he'll be back racing next year," said owner Martha Gerry after she and trainer Frank Whiteley decided to stop the 7-year-old gelding for this year.

Forego won four of seven 1977 starts to boost his earnings to $1,923,967, just $53,939 short of Kelso's all-time record.

Forego will remain at Belmont Park for a time and then winter in Camden, S.C.

Seven teams of notables from across the Nation will headline this year's Grand National Mixed Bag Hunt and Conservation Days in Columbus Nov. 3-5.

The Nebraska Game and Parks Commission said teams of astronauts, professional baseball players, gold medal Olympians, state governors, Nebraska conservationists and several others will compete in the three-day event.

The founder of Grand National, Dr. Bruce Cowgill of Silver Creek, said that although numerous notables will be on hand, the event is really geared to the general public, including those who will compete in the open division.

The Grand National will begin with a barbecue and coon hunt on Nov. 3, the commission said. After that, contestants will be virtually free to pursue whatever kind of hunting they prefer.

KSU cat mascots from Lincoln Zoo

Manhattan, Kan. (AP) — Touchdown VIII, mascot of Kansas State University, is retiring and will be replaced by "Touchdown Twins."

The new mascots are wildcat cubs, litter-mates in the Lincoln, Neb., Children's Zoo.

The present Wildcat mascot reigned since 1971, but began showing his age. Tom Demry, director for Manhattan's Sunset Zoo, said he considers the zoo lucky to be able to arrange for the two cubs, actually known as bobcats.

"We're fortunate because bobcats soon will be on the endangered species list and it is getting difficult, even for zoos, to obtain them," he explained.

The new mascots will be presented to KSU President Duane Acker and the Manhattan zoo in pre-game ceremonies Saturday for the Big Eight contest here between Kansas State and the University of Nebraska.

The presentation will be made by representives of the Lincoln Children's Zoo and NU.

ISU band to miss Nebraska contest

Ames, Iowa (AP) — The Iowa State University band won't be going to the Nebraska football game Oct. 15 because of a policy that prohibits band members from sitting on the sidelines.

Iowa State Band Director Jimmy Reynolds said he talked with Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne and found him to be "nice but adamant — they won't change their policy."

Osborne said Iowa State was allotted between 2,500 and 3,500 tickets and "if the Iowa State people want to set aside some of those for the band, that's okay.

"I have nothing against the Iowa State band, but our policy is to have any band, including our own, seated in the stands," said Osborne.

"The sidelines are cluttered and I'm sure bands do not intentionally disrupt signals, but there is an uproar and these things happen," he added.

Osborne said the policy concerning bands was decided at the Big Eight Conference meeting last summer.

"Our ticket people were notified and so were athletic departments at other schools, including Iowa State," said Osborne.

OU-TU weekend stirs emotions

Dallas (AP) — The Dallas Chamber of Commerce and the police have sort of mixed feelings about the annual invasion of visitors from Oklahoma — they are happy to see them come but they are even happier to see them go.

It is all part of the Southwest madness known as Oklahoma-Texas football weekend which also highlights the Texas State Fair and turns downtown Dallas on Friday night into what a Chamber of Commerce official charitably described as "absolute chaos."

The game itself pits two top teams in the country. Oklahoma is ranked No.2 and Texas is No. 5.

Of course, when it comes to their annual battle, Texans and Oklahomans look upon it as THE GAME of the year. If you are the Texas-Oklahoma football champion, what else is there?

Thousands of visitors from across the Red River are expected to roll into Dallas like a red wave Thursday and Friday in preparation for the Friday night giant pep rally in the downtown area.

Dallas Hilton Hotel officials announced earlier this week their strategy for handling guests during the weekend.

Only one roll of toilet paper per day will be provided in each room during the weekend, hotel doormen will be wearing steel helmets and all lobby furniture will be stored in a safe place.

"We normally place two rolls of toilet paper in each room, but during this weekend we'll only put in one. In the past people have thrown the extra one out the window — sort of like Macy's parade, I guess," said Hilton assistant manager Mark Hancock.

Plastic cups will be substituted for glasses and all maid carts will be removed from the hallways in an effort to reduce ammunition.

"There is a lot of drinking," Hancock said. "And we hope that they do drink a lot, but we just don't want it to get out of hand so they're emptying beer on the couches or in the planters."

Other hotel officials said they were removing room service tables, trays, bottles from service area by 5 p.m. Friday through Sunday.

Jack Andrus, vice president of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, said only "isolated" rooms were available among 24,000 in the city's hotels and motels.

Tickets to the game also were at a premium. Some optimistic souls advertised in the locals papers asking for tickets to the game. One even offered $15 for a ticket.

Koosman seeks contract or trade to Twins

Morris, Minn. (AP) — Lefthander Jerry Koosman of the New York Mets says he has asked the National League team to sign him to a five-year, no-cut, no-trade contract or trade him to the Minnesota Twins.

Koosman wants to play with the American League team so he can be close to his home and family in this west-central Minnesota city.

The 34-year-old southpaw won 21 games for the Mets in 1976 but lost 20 the past season. He returned home Monday.

"I don't want to continue to move my family from Morris to New York and back," said Koosman. "I told the Mets that if they want to keep me, then sign me to a five-year contract. In that case, I would buy a home in New York and make my home there for the balance of my baseball career."

Koosman said he wants a "substantial" raise over his current contract, which reportedly called for about $150,000 per year.

"During the season, I know that the Mets were willing to trade me to the Twins for Lyman Bostock," he said. "I understand that Mr. (Calvin) Griffith was asked to sign Bostock and that once this was done, the Mets would send to to the Twins."

"The deal was delayed. In the meantime, the Mets decided to to trade Tom Seaver to the Cincinnati Reds. Donald Grant of the Mets told me at the time that it would be impossible to trade both Seaver and myself in the middle of the season."

AL Cowens deflates NY with bat, glove

New York (UPI) — Al Cowens, Kansas City's choice for most valuable player, lifted the pressure off the Royals Wednesday with hit bat, glove and spirit.

Cowens capped Kansas City's 7-2 victory over the New York Yankees in the opening game of the American League playoffs with a homer to left field in the eighth inning after a pair of earlier singles.

But it was Cowens' spectacular fielding that really deflated the Yankees and helped wipe out the memory of Kansas City's failure in the playoffs against New York last year.

Cowens nonchalantly robbed Lou Piniella of extra bases in the third inning with a catch against the right field wall, nullified a sure homer by Mickey Rivers in the fifth and made a running catch of a Piniella blooper in the sixth.

"It was over the fence," Cowens said of Rivers' shot. "I jumped and reached over the wall. If I didn't time it just right, it would have been gone. But I thought I had it all the way."

"If you had to vote for the best player baseball, I'd vote for Al Cowens," said Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog.

John Mayberry, who also contributed a two-run homer, agreed totally.

"Al can do anything there is to do in baseball," Mayberry said. "He's got my vote."

Cowens and all the Royals knew the best-of-five series was far from over, but felt Wednesday's victory meant more than just a one-game lead.

"It means a lot to us," Cowens said. "Tomorrow, we can relax more."

"We were the underdogs coming in," said George Brett, "but I don't think we are now. Our hitters were fired up today."

The Royals ran out to a 6-0 lead in the first three innings, but knew they couldn't just sit back.

"I figured with six runs we had it," said Mayberry, "but you know the Yankees, they can always come back. It was gonna be tough for them and we wanted to score as much as we could."

Fred Patek, who contributed a two-run double in the second inning after opening the game with a walk and scoring in the first on Hal McRae's homer, agreed that the Royals had to press for an early advantage.

"They've got a good lineup, loaded with power," said the 5-foot-5 Patek, who led off because Herzog felt he might be able to squeeze a walk out of fastball-pitching Don Gullett. "Even when you have a two, four or six-run lead, it's not enough against them. I think you want to go ahead and score as many runs as you can."

Paul Splittorff, who kept the Yankees under control until he tired and was replaced by Doug Bird in the ninth, said he was "honored" to have the confidence of Herzog in being named the opening game pitcher.

"I didn't have my best stuff today," Splittorff said, "but it was good enough. It's a thrill and I'm honored the manager and my teammates have confidence in me. I got a little tired in the seventh inning and I was glad he took me out when he did."

"Paul only threw about 70 pitches," Herzog said, "but he was getting tired. He pitched a fine game."

Herzog said Andy Hassler, 9-6 during the regualar season, would start for the Royals Thursday night against New York's Ron Guidry. Herzog said he made up his mind about Hassler "when the last out was made" and had selected the left-hander mainly to shut down New York's left-handed power to the short right field fence.

New schedule for golfers

Washington (AP) — The $10 million Professional Golfers Association Tour probably will be restructured next year to finish on Oct. 1 with the World Series of Golf, thus providing a greater opportunity for international play.

Commissioner Deane Beman announced the radical schedule departure Wednesday, saying that the World Series of Golf could thus take on new stature and significance as the climactic event of the season.

The tournament, consisting of a blue ribbon field of champions, traditionally has been played at the Firestone Country Club course in Akron, Ohio. It was held this year on Sept. 2-5.

Under the new setup, the final tournament would serve as the sport's version of football's Super Bowl and baseball's World Series. The schedule would end conflict with the busy fall sports schedule.

The 1978 dates would be Sept. 28-Oct. 1.

"Under the proposed schedule, our official season would conclude a month earlier than now," Beman said. "This would open the door to a couple of interesting alternatives for the players—increased participation in foreign events and the addition of a number of unofficial post-season tournaments."

The proposal must be approved by the Tournament Policy Board, the 10-member body which includes four players, three PGA directors and three independent business personalities. The board meets Nov. 1 in Orlando, Fla.

The normal tour format runs from January to November. This season it consisted of 40 tournaments with prize money going as high as $300,000.

Watson garners match play lead

Virginia Water, England (AP) — Tom Watson scored a 2 and 1 victory over Taiwan's Hsieh Min-nan and led four Americans through the first, 36-hole round Wednesday in the $225,000 World Match Golf Championship.

"It wasn't a masterpiece, but it got the job done," said Watson, whose credentials made his the world's top player this year. He hit a lot more good shots than I did. I just lucked out."

PGA champion Lanny Wadkins, Ray Floyd and Hale Irwin also scored first round victories. The only American loser was U.S. Open champ Hubert Green whose putting cost him a 5 and 4 setback to Graham Marsh of Australia.

Wadkins downed Britain's Neil Coles 5 and 4; Irwin ousted British Ryder Cup star Peter Oosterhuis 1-up; and Floyd was forced to the 37th hole before scoring a 1-up triumph over Mexico's Ernesto Acosta.

In other matches, Manuel Pinero of Spain rallied to upset five-time Match Play play champ Gary Player of South Africa 6 and 5; South African Hugh Baiocchi eliminated defending champion David Graham of Australia 2 and 1; and Spain's Seve Ballesteros of Spain topped 20-year-old Nick Faldo of England 4 and 2.

Thursday's 36-hole quarter-final matches at the Wentworth Golf Club pitted Irwin against Baiocchi; Marsh vs. Pinero; Watson vs. Ballesteros, and Wadkins vs. Floyd.

First round losers received $8,100. Those who drop out in the second round will get $15,750. The eventual winner receives $52,500.

Watson, who won the British Open, the Masters and three other U.S. titles this year with winnings of $310,000, never trailed against Min-nan. He went 4-up after the morning 18, got it to 5-up with a 10-foot birdie putt on the second hole.

So you think you know football?

Each week the Lincoln Star brings its readers a football officiating problem in which the official rules interpretation varies within the National Federation of State High School Associations, the NCAA and the NFL.

For instance:

Team A has the ball on its own 30-yard line, 2nd down and 5. A long pass is thrown. B's safety attempts to distract A's halfback, who is in position to receive the pass at B's 40 yard line. He waves his hands in front of his face. No physical contact is made. the ball falls incomplete.

What would you rule?

H.S. Federation — Defensive pass interference — A's ball 1st and 10 at its 45-yard line.

By high school rules, face guarding, without contact is pass interference. Defensive pass interference is penalized with fifteen yards from the previous line-of-scrimmage and an automatic 1st and 10.

NCAA — No foul — Incomplete pass.

NCAA rules require physical contact for pass interference.

NFL — Defensive pass interference — A's ball 1st and 10 at B's 40 yard line.

NFL penalized face guarding as pass interference. The penalty for defensive pass interference is an automatic 1st and 10 at the spot at the foul.

Kingdome hit with lawsuit

Seattle (AP) — A third lawsuit has been filed over construction problems in building the Kingdome.

The latest suit is a $13.1 million action brought by the Donald M. Drake Co. of Portland, Ore., against three architectural firms — Naramore, Bain, Brady and Johanson; Skilling, Helle, Christiansen and Robertson; and Praeger, Kavanagh and Waterbury.

Drake was removed as prime contractor on the Kingdome in late 1974 and Peter Kiewit Sons of Seattle finished construction of the facility, used predominantly for major league sports, rock music concerts and exhibitions.

The lawsuit claims the architects "negligenty prepared defective plans and specifications", disrupted the contractor's work schedule and tried to turn county officials against Drake when officials of the Portland firm expressed "legitimate concern for the safety of the project."

A trial is scheduled Nov. 28 in U.S. District Court on a suit by Drake, now doing business as FMD Corp., and a countersuit by King County over claims ranging from $10 million to $15 million over the change in contractors.

Bergland announces sugar subsidy details

Washington (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland Wednesday announced final details of a temporary federal subsidy plan to help domestic growers of 1977-crop sugarbeets and sugar cane.

Bergland told a news conference, however, that the payment plan is only "a temporary remedy" and that the Agriculture Department is proceding to design a sugar price support program called for in farm legislation signed by President Carter last week.

Since the temporary payments will come from the U.S. Treasury they are not expected to affect consumer sugar prices. No estimate of the program's cost was available.

The temporary sugar payment plan was announced on Sept. 15 and was effective with 1977-crop sugar marketed since then. Wednesday's announcement was a further elaboration on the program.

Under it, USDA will make payments to sugar processors, who then will be required to pay growers specified minimum prices for their crops.

Basically, the payments will enable processors to pay growers as if the price of raw sugar is a minimum of 13.5 cents a pound, considered a break-even price for many producers. Prices now are about 10 cents a pound.

Officials said that the support plan, aimed at the 13.5 cents objective, translates to a price to sugarbeet growers of $22.84 a ton.

The department said sugar cane producers in Florida will get a support price of $18.37 a ton for cane of average quality and that the Louisiana cane support will be $15.90 a ton.

The department said "the processor must certify that producers will be paid no less than the applicable support price" in order to qualify for the payments.

"Under normal and traditional methods of settlement where the processor would be required to make a payment greater than the support price, the processor will be obligated to make such payment over and above the support price to the producer," the department said.

Further, the plan allows support price adjustments for beets and cane that do not meet the average quality criteria if the method "is agreed upon by the producer and the processor," it said.

"The regulations do not prohibit further adjustments due to normal and traditional customs and practices agreed upon between the producer and processor with respect to the marketing of sugarbeets, sugar cane or sugar," it said.

Officials said that payments will be made to processors as quickly as information sought from them is available, the national market price is determined and other provisions of the program are met. No timetable for payments was set, however.

Omaha will get tough on leash laws

Omaha (UPI) — Mayor Al Veys said Wednesday the city will cooperate with the Nebraska Humane Society in strengthening enforcement of the city's leash laws.

At a news conference with the mayor, Ron Hemmingsen, the new director of the Humane Society, said he would undertake "an aggressive program" to deal with Omaha's estimated 65,000 dogs.

Veys said he felt the society's enforcement program has not worked in the past.

The city contributes $85,000 to help run a Humane Society animal shelter.

While the majority of Omaha dog owners "take good care of their animals," others ignore leash laws, allow their animals to "terrorize" children and "run into grocery stores and knock down displays," said Veys, a grocery store owner.

Veys complained that he, rather than the Humane Society, had been receiving complaints about stray dogs.

"I have no nets or trucks or anything else," to cope with the problem, Veys told Hemmingsen.

Crosby, Stills, Nash concert ticket sales complaints arise

By Deb Gray
Star Staff Writer

At 6 a.m. Monday, a Lincoln man said he and a friend started their vigil at the Brandeis Gateway Store in a quest for seats at the Oct. 28 Crosby, Stills and Nash concert.

When his ticket window opened about 10 a.m., he said he learned that all of the station's $10 tickets — the price for the floor seating — had been sold.

He said a clerk told people in line that tickets had been sold to Brandeis employes.

A woman complained that a co-worker bought an excess of over 10 tickets at Brandeis Gateway, when her ticket station, at the Nebraska Union, had a limit of 10 tickets.

According to program office regulations, ticket outlets cannot sell more than 10 tickets to a customer, Gary Gilger, Nebraska Union program adviser, said.

The attorney general's office will review the sales procedures used for the Oct. 28 concert, to be in the Nebraska Sports Complex, to determine if ticket outlets used misleading advertising, according to Jerrold Fennell, attorney in the consumer affairs division.

Gilger, denied any false advertising. The ads — mainly through posters and radio spots — just said tickets would go on sale Monday, not to whom and when.

John Brown, manager of the Brandeis Gateway store, refused to comment on the number of tickets that could have been pre-sold to employes. No malice was intended in its handling of the ticket sales, he said.

The entire incident, he said, has been blown out of proportion.

"If it did happen it was totally unauthorized," according to Helmut Dahlke, Brandeis vice president. "If there was any pre-selling, that person will be reprimanded."

Dahlke said Brandeis has a policy of "absolutely no pre-selling" to employes.

Complaints also have arisen about pre-selling to sports center employes.

Gilger said a limited number of tickets are pre-sold to sports complex and program office employes, but these employes do not get the best tickets. "That wouldn't be fair."

Gilger said misconceptions arose because people did not realize how few $10 tickets were available to meet the demand. The 1,400 tickets were divided equally between the Nebraska Union, which has two outlets, and Brandeis, which has eight outlets.

Dahlke said problems could have arisen because the store had underestimated the number of Crosby, Stills and Nash fans. Reaction to ticket sales was "unprecedented," he said.

Dahlke said Brandeis ticket personnel would meet to insure that no such incidents happen in the future.

"This has taught us a lesson," he said. "We're not above saying we made a mistake. If we screwed up, we only ask that they give us another chance."

Prostitute tax weighed

Omaha (AP) — City Councilman Richard Takechi says he doesn't approve of prostitution, but figures the city should license and tax prostitutes.

"If prostitution is the oldest profession, why not license it and get some income off the license?" Takechi asked Tuesday. "They do it in Reno."

Takechi said he isn't ready to formally propose the idea to council, but said he might pursue it when he gets some time.

He said the city could make certain prostitutes have regular physical checkups.

Organized labor wins 3 key fights in House

Washington (AP) — Organized labor won three key fights Wednesday as the House prepared for a final vote on legislation to streamline the nation's labor laws to make it easier to organize workers.

The House voted to speed up first-time affiliation elections for workers deciding whether to joining a union, to bar repeated violators of the labor laws from getting federal contracts and to give union organizers equal access with employers in presenting arguments to workers on company time.

These were at the heart of the proposed labor law revisions the Carter administration and organized labor backed to reaffirm the 42-year-old right of workers to organize for better pay and working conditions.

Final debate on the bill was scheduled to resume Thursday but passage appeared certain. The Senate plans to take up the bill next year.

"We have the issue and we have the votes," said Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., the bill's chief sponsor, after nearly 10 hours debate and more than two dozen amendments.

"This is not a punitive bill and they just haven't been able to lay a hand on it on that basis," he said.

In the last several weeks, business had united against the bill with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers. They contended it would increase the powers of "union bosses."

But, with alleged violations of labor laws by textile giant J. P. Stevens frequently cited by both Democrats and Republicans, the House consistently turned aside business-backed attempts to weaken the bill and stayed with labor's position.

The initial victory came on a 247 to 168 vote to reject a business-backed proposal by Rep. John Erlenborn, R-Ill., to eliminate from the bill the provision giving unions equal access to workers, on company time and premises.

Later, the House voted to speed up first-time affiliation elections to no more than 25 days after a majority of workers signs a union petition and gives it to their employer. This would be about half the average 45-day time lag that currently prevails. However, some elections are delayed for months and even years.

The House later adopted a compromise giving the secretary of Labor latitude in deciding whether to prohibit repeated labor law violators — companies or unions — from receiving federal contracts for up to three years.

The original proposal would have made the prohibition mandatory after the second violation of a National Labor Relations Board order or a court order.

Labor had argued that workers are "captive audiences" for employers trying to keep unions out and that union organizers are hard put to get a list of workers, let alone present their arguments to them.

Business particularly objected to giving unions equal access to workers, saying that this was an invasion of their ownership rights and that unions have ample opportunity to talk to workers during lunch breaks or after hours.

Democrats agreed to GOP amendments giving employers an equivalent access to workers at all public functions or union events where the issue of union affiliation is considered. Visits to workers' homes by employers would not be permitted, however. The overall equal-access section finally was approved by a vote of 408 to 8.

The proposed revisions to the National Labor Relations Act affect only the initial union organizing period.

Under the bill, the NLRB would be expanded from five to seven members to take care of the three-fold increase in appeals in recent years. The board also would draw up rules, for the first time, defining appropriate bargaining units.

The bill also includes a requirement that workers illegally fired for union organizing activities be reinstated immediately at double back pay and that workers be compensated for lost benefits if a company refuses to negotiate an initial contract after the union is voted in.

Baby defies medical history

Little Rock, Ark. (AP) — Doctors kept a close watch Wednesday over the crib of a 3-week-old girl who defied medical history by surviving surgery that separated her from an attached twin.

Although medical center officials withheld the parents' names, the child's first and middle names were listed as Ferra Hope. She will probably be called by her middle name, Dr. Steve Golladay said Wednesday.

The twin sister died during the five-hour operation Saturday. Golladay, who headed the surgical team at the University of Arkansas Medical Center, said physicians had expected that.

The surviving twin "is a really pretty little girl who drinks from a bottle and smiles," Golladay said.

He said the 7-pound baby underwent further surgery late Tuesday and "tolerated the procedure" to stop internal abdominal bleeding. Her condition had stabilized on Wednesday but remained critical, he said.

Golladay put the infant's chances of survival at 50-50.

Never in medical history had a child survived more than six hours after an operation to separate twins born with one trunk and a conjoined heart, the doctor said. Only 25 other cases of the condition, called thoracopagus, have been recorded.

Four of those sets of twins died within six hours, three were not separated and died within 90 days and 18 were stillborn, Golladay said.

The twins, born Sept. 14 at El Dorado in southern Arkansas, weighed 11 pounds, had one torso, two heads, two legs, two normal arms and a third arm with two hands attached to the wrist in a "praying hands" position, the doctor said.

If the surgery had not been performed, the twin "would be dead by now, I'm sure," Golladay said.

Prosecuting Atty. Lee A. Munson of Little Rock had issued a legal opinion before the surgery saying physicians felt "the twins must be separated to save the life of the primary twin. The parasitic twin will die as a result of the operation."

Munson said Wednesday his office "plowed new ground" with the opinion because Arkansas law does not address such a situation.

"We had to take all the doctors' expertise into consideration," he said. "Did this amount to some sort of manslaughter, or homocide? In our opinion, it did not, based on the Karen Quinlan case and others we cited. I have not had one call on this."

Munson also said the parents' wishes had to be considered. They concurred in the doctors' plans, he said.

"There comes a time when a decision has to be made individually, and the State of Arkansas, or me, or the United States, or no one else has a right to interfere in that decision.

"It is so personal and so private that they had a right . . . to make that decision and I don't think the state has a right to interfere with it."

The names of the parents are being "guarded like Ft. Knox," said a spokesman for the University of Arkansas Medical Center. "They've got all they can cope with right now."

Golladay did say the father was a welder and the mother was in her mid-20s. Golladay said, "This is perhaps the most stable family I have ever seen." He said the couple has another child with a birth defect. Other couples would have been "crushed" by their burden, the doctor said.

Feds reach for wallets

Philadelphia (AP) — Even the federal government knows you can't fight City Hall.

That's why it agreed to pay Philadelphia $35,208 in traffic fines collected by cars belonging to the General Service Administration motor pool.

The fines are for 1,905 parking violations from January 1974 through April 1977. Payment is due Oct. 21.

City court officials at one point had threatened to impound the cars, but backed off when the feds reached for their wallets.

Jet lands after bomb threat

Vancouver (UPI) — A Pan Am jumbo jet traveling from San Francisco to Tokyo with 302 persons aboard landed at Vancouver Wednesday after a bomb threat. The 288 passengers got off safely.

A note found in a bathroom of the Boeing 747 said there were eight bombs aboard the plane. It directed the pilot to dump fuel and divert the jet to Vancouver, where the passengers were to get off and fly to Mexico.

A Transport Canada spokesman said the plane landed safely in a remote part of the airfield and the 250 economy and 38 first class passengers "disembarked in an orderly fashion."

"There was no running," he said. "They walked slowly and there seemed to be no panic."

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police said the passengers used a portable stairway to leave the plane. A spokesman said the jet's emergency exit chutes were not used. Three large buses took the passengers to an immigration area.

Iceberg pullers predict rough go

By Michael Holmes

Ames, Iowa (AP) — A veteran of antarctic operations and two men who've towed icebergs predict rough going for any berg pulled to the Middle East as a fresh water source.

"It's a difficult job, yes. But I don't think it's impossible," Christian Ple of the French oil company, Total, said Wednesday at the First International Conference on Iceberg Utilization.

Ple said his firm has towed some 150 icebergs for short distances in the waters off Greenland to keep drifting bergs away from offshore oil-drilling platforms.

Ple said his firm has towed icebergs of up to two million tons — much smaller than the 100 million-ton iceberg Prince Mohamed Al-Faisal has proposed to pull to Saudi Arabia.

The most serious problems with towing the mammoth pieces of ice, said Ple, will be finding a strong, crackless berg; having all necessary equipment in place at precisely the right moment, and preventing the ice mass from melting or breaking up as it is pulled through the ocean.

"We've towed icebergs since 1971," the Frenchman said. "We've been about 80 per cent successful."

Dr. Ross Peters of Memorial University of Newfoundland also has been involved in iceberg towing.

During a two-week period in 1971, his university towed seven bergs away from oil rigs off the Canadian coast.

While agreeing that towing the 100 million-ton icebergs probably can be done, Peters said melting will be the biggest problem.

Some of the 175 scientists attending the conference have proposed wrapping bergs in plastic to insulate them against warm water. But Peters said that is not feasible.

He said huge icebergs will be more stable to tow but will require ships of enormous power to pull them at even the low speed of one knot. Such ships could destroy the icebergs because of the large amount of sea water their propellers will push back on the ice.

Retired U.S. Navy Commander Robert Thurman, a former Navy operations officer in Antarctica, agreed with Peters.

Although some scientists say the disintegration rate would be about 30 per cent, Thurman said he believes "it's possible that when you reach the equator, you won't even have an iceberg and will have to go back and get another one."

He also said timing is critical in any antarctic operation. "There's only two to three months before the weather turns bad. And once it turns, they're done for the year."

Room to park; phrase crowded

Bellevue, Wash. (AP) — A nugget of gobbledygook from a 75-page report about parking in this Seattle suburb:

"Visitors to and occupants of the Business Center Building and the Seattle Trust Building to not appear to perceive the demand for parking as significantly exceeding the supply of available parking spaces within those buildings' designed parking lots even during peak demand periods."

In other words:

People who use the Business Center and the Seattle Trust Building say the parking lots are never full.

Council bans nude bathing

San Diego, Calif. (UPI) — The San Diego City Council, going along with the results of a city ballot, Wednesday voted to ban nude bathing on Black's Beach.

Supporters of nude bathing immediately announced plans for massive civil disobedience and lengthy court fights to challenge the council's decision.

Black's Beach, a 900-foot strip of isolated beach adjacent to La Jolla, was declared a "swimsuit optional" beach by the council in April 1974 and quickly gained fame worldwide as the only legal public nude beach in the United States.

But by a 55-45% vote in a Sept. 20 election, voters said legal nude bathing should be ended.

The council voted 8-1 to implement the ban. Councilmember Maureen O'Connor, who cast the only "no" vote, said, "I think one beach is not overwhelming for us to allow." The city has 31 miles of public beach.

Robert Jacobs, representing the nude beaches committee, said the fight to eliminate the beach was led by "blue noses and bigots." He said an initiative drive will begin to get the matter back on the ballot.

A woman in her 70s said the city's action was a deprivation of constitutional rights. And 8-year-old Jill Gerber, boosted to the microphone by her father Richard, pleaded tearfully, "Please don't take it (the beach) away from me."

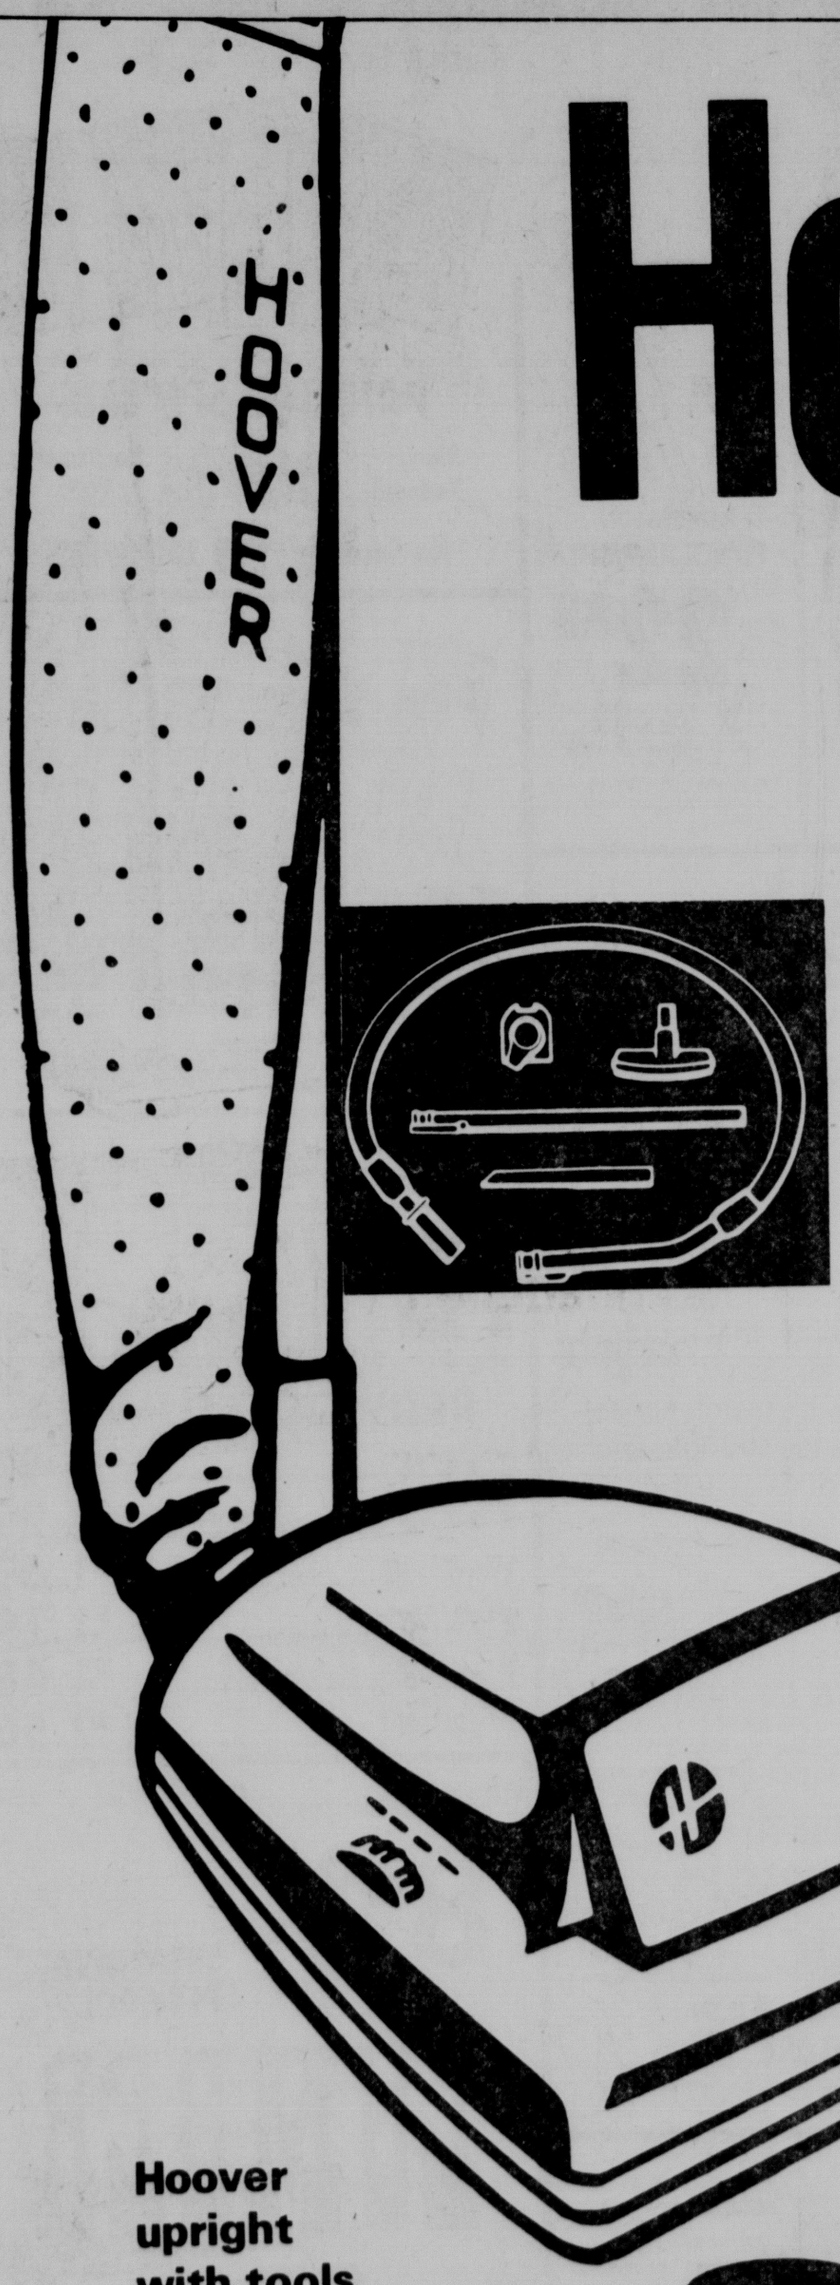

After the council approved the ordinance introduced by Councilman Lee Hubbard, Hubbard asked if police could be instructed to "not start knocking heads," to delay enforcement of the ban for 90 days. Mayor Pete Wilson said it would be inappropriate.

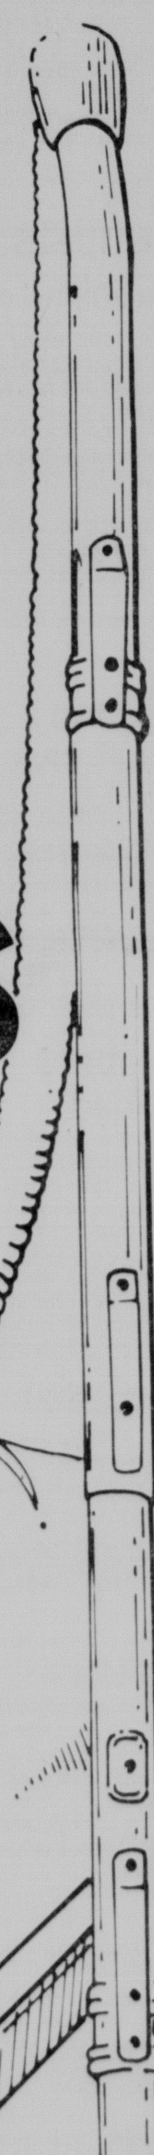

Nude bathing supporter George Hales said the council's action will result in "vast expense and mass lawsuits." Earlier he announced formation of a group called "Skin Power" and said its intent "is to totally disrupt the law enforcement and judicial processes of the cities" and to stage simultaneous peaceful nude-ins at beaches.

Dorothy Carroll, who said she doesn't go to Black's Beach, said the issue before the voters was misleading and confusing, leading voters to believe there was a threat the nude beach would spread throughout the city.

"I don't participate," she told the council, "but you should know they are not lecherous young men and women passionately gyrating in the hot sand."

Platte River use opposed

Omaha (UPI) — The Metropolitan Utilities District's proposal to use Platte River water has been criticized as unfair and environmentally unsound.

Cliff Zicafoose, president of Wet, Inc., a Saunders County citizen's group whose name stands for Water, Environment and Taxes, Wednesday told the MUD board that Missouri River water would better serve the district's future needs.

He said MUD's main reason for locating on the Platte was to save money, without regard for environmental considerations.

Robert Bell, MUD's general manager, told Zicafoose the district has "the same deep concern that your group does — that is, that the river stays wet."

Bell said the cost of pumping water from the Missouri River to far west Omaha would be "fantastic" because underground pipe would have to be installed through the city rather than through cornfields.

Zicafoose questioned MUD's statement that it would take between 30 million and 50 million gallons of water a day from the Platte River.

"When you get a large demand for water, you'll increase the capacity of your plant," Zicafoose told the directors.

The board made no decision on the matter, and advised managers to conduct meetings with the Saunders County organization.

The board decided against an increase in natural gas rates, even though Northern Natural Gas Co., MUD's wholesale supplier, has asked for $108 million rate hike.

Bell said the district expected the rate increase request to be reduced by the Federal Power Commission.

UNL's Soukup named winner

University of Nebraska-Lincoln associate professor Rodney J. Soukup was named the outstanding faculty member in electrical engineering by the university's chapter of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers.

The institute makes a selection each year on the basis of student balloting on the faculty member's style of teaching, enthusiasm and involvement with students.

Employment agencies' actions unlawful

State Labor Commission Gerald Chizek ruled Wednesday that certain practices of two Lincoln employment agencies are unlawful.

Republic Personnel Service System and Interchange Personnel, both owned by Dennis H. Penner, will close for 30 days as a result of the ruling, said James Doyle, State Department of Labor investigator.

Penner was charged with using illegal practices at the two private employment agencies during a Sept. 20 license revocation hearing.

The hearing was discontinued during its second day after Penner's attorneys and Asst. Nebraska Atty. Gen. Jerrold Fennel reached a tentative agreement, which included the 30-day suspension.

The agreement had to be officially approved by Chizek before the 30-day license suspension became effective.

State investigators had charged that the two agencies used deceptive advertising, illegal employe practices and possible discrimination in placing job applicants.

SCC construction issue rears again

Associated Press

Southeast Community College has violated a court ruling by starting campus construction at 84th and "O" streets in Lincoln, according to a new filing in Lancaster County District Court.

The filing is an application for further relief which came from Lincoln attorney Chauncey Barney. A show cause hearing is set before Judge Dale Fahrnbruch for mid-afternoon Thursday in the matter.

Barney said this is merely continuation of the original case in which the Lancaster County District Court judge ruled that design-build bidding methods planned by the college board were illegal.

Since then, the college campus construction was started on the $5.9 million project, but under a contract with the Southeast Community College Foundation rather than through the board.

Barney's petition alleges the college violated the judge's original order by not rebidding the project.

Zorinsky votes against committee staff transfer

Sen. Edward Zorinsky Wednesday said he voted against a resolution adding staff from the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition to the Senate Agriculture Committee because of statements in the former unit's report on dietary goals.

"This report was released with the approval of the Nutrition Committee and has come under strong attack for relying on heresay rather than hard facts in making allegations trying to relate health problems to consumption of beef and poultry products," the Nebraska Democrat said.

"Neither the U.S. Senate nor the people of this nation, for that matter, needs this committee or its staff."

Its work has been shown to be "directly contrary to the best interests of our livestock and poultry industries," Zorinsky said.

Two political scientists will speak in Lincoln

Two political scientists who are researching what Americans learned from the Vietnam War will speak at the Hendricks Symposium on "American Politics and the Search for World Order" Friday at the Lincoln Hilton.

Professors Ole Holsti of Duke University and James Rosenau of the University of Southern California will present a paper discussing American consensus on foreign policy was disrupted by the car in Vietnam.

The professors also have found it will be difficult to create a new consensus in support of American foreign policy in the 1980s because there are disagreements about what should be learned from the war.

The symposium is sponsored by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and will continue through Saturday.

Insanity verdict is delivered in Omaha sexual assault case

Omaha (AP) — A young Omaha man charged with sexual assault is innocent by reason of insanity, Douglas County District Court Judge James Murphy has ruled.

Murphy said it could not be proved that John B. Mayfield, 21, had sufficient intent last May when a 54-year-old Decatur woman was sexually assaulted.

Mayfield was referred to the Douglas County Board of Mental Health for a hearing on possible forced commitment for psychiatric care, prosecutors said. Mayfield remains in custody.

Lincoln task force member's renomination is undecided

No action has been taken by the Clinton Neighborhood Association on whether to support the renomination of Eric Youngberg for the Community Development Task Force.

President Willard Woodside said a meeting probably will be held the first part of next week on the issue.

Youngberg's renomination for reappointment to the task force was rejected by the City Council Monday, but some council members said they will change their vote if the neighborhood organization backs him.

Bergland expected at session

Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland will address about 400 Nebraskans during the Governor's Conference on Food and Hunger Issues Nov. 11 at First Plymouth Church at 20th and D Sts.

Bergland will arrive at the airport at 8:45 a.m. and will be escorted directly to the church. He plans to return to Washington on a noon flight, according to those arranging the event.

Services slated for minister

Polk (UPI) — Funeral services will be Thursday at the Polk Evangelical Free Church for the Rev. Henry Nyberg, who died Monday. He was 64.

The Rev. Nyberg died at his home in Chicago of an apparent heart attack, a family spokesman said.

He grew up in Polk and had served as the minister in churches near Marquette, at Kearney and at North Platte. He also served at churches in Iowa and Illinois.

Two speakers told for dinner

Joseph Greve, job development manager with Projects with Industry at the Menninger Foundation in Topeka, Kan., and Jack Malone, director of elderly and handicapped transportation for the Topeka Transit Authority, will speak at the President's Dinner of the Nebraska Easter Seal Society Friday at 7 p.m. at the Lincoln Hilton.

Greve and Malone, who are both disabled, will discuss employment, transportation and recreation for the handicapped.

Farmers to protest when Carter visits

Brush, Colo. (AP) — A farm-protest group that mustered 2,000 angry farmers for a meeting with Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland two weeks ago says it will do the same thing when President Carter comes to Denver Oct. 22.

The farmers plan to line roads and highways into Denver with farm machinery and protest signs, warning they will strike if their economic situation is not improved through federal legislation.

Those plans were outlined at a meeting in Brush of American Agriculture, a grass-roots movement that is trying to organize farmers for a Dec. 14 strike.

The group is demanding 100% parity for their crops, a federal guarantee that through farm loans and price supports they will get back what it costs to raise their crops, plus a modest profit.

Without favorable federal action, the group says, farmers supporting its goals will stop producing and selling crops in December, and will stop purchasing farm equipment.

Bergland and other federal officials have said they see little likelihood such a strike would have much impact nationwide.

About 200 northeastern Colorado farmers showed up in Brush to hear American Agriculture spokesmen urge support for the strike and outline their plans for protest during Carter's four-hour stopover in Colorado en route to California.

Meanwhile, the American Farm Bureau announced that a nationwide campaign to fight federal acreage limitations in agriculture will be launched in Denver Oct. 18.

Little help is expected from Carter farm bill

Washington (UPI) — Farmers participating in a nationwide "phone-in" sponsored by the Agriculture Council of America said by a better than 2 to 1 margin Wednesday they expect little help from the omnibus farm bill President Carter signed into law last week.

Callers were about equally divided on whether a farm strike currently being proposed by some angry producers would have any effect.

Officials of ACA, a nonprofit organization financed by farmers and business groups, said about 250 farmers and farm wives managed to get calls through during the four hours in which a toll-free telephone hot line was open.

They said more than 90% of the callers reported, in answer to a questionnaire, that their incomes were down because of low prices for grains and some other farm products this year, and that they planned to spend less for farm equipment and family living expenses.

Asked if Carter's new farm bill and its increased supports for some crops would help, 20% of the callers said yes. But 51% said no and the rest were undecided.

Asked if the proposed farm strike would be effective, 41% said yes and 41% said no. The remaining 18% were undecided.

Press group sues Kissinger

Washington (UPI) — The Reporters Committee for a Free Press asked a federal judge to declare that former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger violated the federal records act by removing transcripts of his phone conversations from official files.

Kissinger has donated the transcripts to the Library of Congress with a provision that only he will have access to them for 25-years.

Crop, animal prices down

Washington (AP) — The prices that farmers receive for their crops and animals fell an average of one per cent between mid-August and mid-September, the Agriculture Department reported.

It was the fourth consecutive monthly decline.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said prices for milk, lettuce and oranges improved, but they were offset by lower prices for soybeans, hogs, potatoes, corn and cotton.

Rooster named Sugar can stay

Orlando, Fla. (AP) — Sugar, a rooster who can ride bicycles and skateboards, won't have to go away after all.

The City Council partially lifted a ban on chickens in residential neighborhoods so 17-year-old Janet Harris can keep her 9½-pound Plymouth Rock.

Some neighborhood boys gave him to her about 15 months ago.

In addition to his knack for perching on moving bikes and skateboards, Sugar can do all of the things that other roosters can do — like crow at the sun.

"Sugar is not only giving our family pleasure, but he gives the whole community pleasure, except in the morning when he crows," said Janet's mother.

The revised ban allows residents who already have chickens to keep them, upon approval of the community development director.

Dow Ind. —4.68

New York (AP) — The stock market, pleagued by lingering interest-rate worries, declined for the second straight session in fairoy quiet trading Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 4.68 to 837.32 after a 9.98-point setback Tuesday.

Losers held a 3-2 advantage over gainers on the New York Stock Exchange, and the exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks gave up .17 to 52.43.

The San Francisco-based Wells Fargo Bank raised its prime lending rate late Tuesday from 7¼ to 7½ per cent.

No other leading bank had matched the increase by Wednesday's close, but Wall Street was still expecting some further moves to 7½ within the next few days.

The rising trend in the basic charge on blue-chip loans follows a recent advance in open market money rates, which was prompted by Federal Reserve moves aimed at slowing the growth of the money supply in order to restrain inflationary pressures.

Analysts said traders seemed to be looking ahead uneasily to the weekly money-supply report from the Fed on Thursday afternoon for the latest indication of how well the central bank is doing in its efforts to curtail monetary growth and inflation.

Brokers said stock prices also suffered from dismay over the market's abrupt downturn Tuesday after a rally that lifted the Dow more than 17 points in the three previous sessions.

By the close Wednesday most of that advance had been wiped out.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials dropped .40 on the day to 105.20, and S&P's 5 0 0-stock composite index showed a .35 loss at 95.68.

American Telephone & Telegraph was the most active issue as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE, down ¾ at 61⅜.

The stock fell 1⅛ Tuesday on reports that a recent court decision opened up the possibility of competition for the company in long-distance telephone service.

Savin Business Machines tumbled 6 to 28 in active trading, continuing its nosedive since reports appeared that the company's Japanese supplier of copying machines might be planning to enter the U.S. copier market itself.

Five stores to get bank terminals

First National Bank of Lincoln will place banking terminals in five retail locations throughout Lincoln later this month.

The customer-operated terminals will not give cash but will give the customer access to his checking or savings accounts.

The customer will insert a transaction card into the terminal and will receive a form which is taken to a check-out counter. There he can get cash, make a purchase or a deposit.

Anyone issued a Key card by First National or Gateway Bank will have access to the terminals.

The bank-owned terminals would be located in Mr. B IGA stores at both 48th and Van Dorn and 27th and Nebraska Highway 2; B & R IGA store at 17th and Washington; Miller & Paine, downtown store (fifth floor credit office), and N St. Drive-in Package Liquor, 19th and N.

The State Banking and Finance Department and the U.S. comptroller of the currency have approved the terminal plan.

Strike worries, harvest news depress prices

Chicago (AP) — Uncertainty over a strike that has halted grain shipments at New Orleans, combined with harvest pressure, depressed soybean and grain futures prices Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Soybeans lost an average of five cents a bushel and corn was nearly three cents lower. Wheat declined a two cents, but oats were narrowly mixed.

Prices were mixed until around noon, when a large sale by a commission house with commercial connections triggered a downturn in the soybean complex.

Scattered showers in the Midwest overnight failed to impede harvesting, and clearing weather prompted peculative selling.

Facts accurate on LT&T stock

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co. Executive Vice President James Geist stated Wednesday night that at no time did LT&T or its banker give out wrong information on the sale of its stock last June.

"No erroneous, false, or otherwise misleading information was given to the media at any time," Geist said.

LT&T executives were responding to published reports which said misleading information about the stock issue was used to bolster the sale of LT&T stock.

The dispute arose during a hearing before the Nebraska Public Service Commission earlier Wednesday when LT&T's investment banker reported on the sale of 350,000 shres of LT&T common stock in June.

The commission is holding the hearings on the utility's request to increase rates by $6 million.

John C. James, vice president of Dean Whitter & Co. in Chicago, said under cross-examination he wasn't sure how much time it took to sell the stock. He gave the impression that it may have taken up to a week. Reports of the sale of the stock in June said the stock was issued within 24 hours after it was offered on June 7.

However, after checking his records, James returned to the witness stand late Wednesday and said records in New York show the stock issue was sold out within the 24-hour period, as reported to the news media at that time.

In trying to explain to the commission on how the stock was issued, James told reporters outside the hearing room that he may have given the wrong impression while testifying.

In attempting to make his point, James referred to LT&T, then to a hypotethical sale of stock for a hypothetical company and back to LT&T again.

"I may have used a poor example," said James who testified before a regulatory agency for the first time in this case.

James also was quoted as saying investment firms feed information to the press to give potential buyers the impression stock is selling quicker than it is. Such a tactic would make the stock seem more attractive.

James said he did not mean to imply that such had occurred in the sale of LT&T stock or that his firm gives out misleading information on stock sales.

"It's not our intent at all to mislead anyone about the sale of any stock," he said.

James said the 350,000 shares of stock were sold for less than the book value, mainly because LT&T's rate of return is less than it should be. The stock sold for $30 a share, generating $10.5 million. LT&T's net proceeds from the sale were about $10 million.

"I think it was a proper price," James testified.

"It wasn't grossly underpriced. And, I don't think it was grossly overpriced."

The Dean Whitter firm, which was the managing underwriter for LT&T, bought the stock from LT&T and resold it to 35 firms.

James was called a witness by LT&T to bolster the company's argument that it needs a higher rate of return to keep its net earnings at a high enough level to continue to carry out its construction programs.

Entertaining said duty for executives

The Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co. belongs to the Nebraska Club, the University Club and the Lincoln Country Club because top executives in LT&T are expected to entertain occasionally.

LT&T Executive Vice President James Geist explained Wednesday why the utility has spent $56,298 so far this year on dues and memberships and donated another $55,820 to charities.

Memberships in country clubs and exclusive restaurants are bought for company officers and managers "who have occasion to entertain occasionally."

He said officials entertain large customers, employe groups, a guest from another utility and at other times when it is appropriate.

"You're expected to entertain them," he asserted.

LT&T also pays the membership dues for employes to belong to a number of civic groups in Lincoln and in other communities where LT&T offices are located.

"We think that civic clubs do a lot of good for the community," Geist said.

"We think we should participate."

The company also pays the fees for employes to belong to a number of professional organizations. LT&T also belongs to its own affiliate groups, such as the Independent Telephone Association.

Geist said, "It's absolutely necessary to stay current in this field," citing new technology and the need for employes and officers to keep track of what is happening within the industry.

LT&T also donates money to worthy causes which fall into the non-profit, charitable organization category.

"We get literally hundreds of requests for contributions every year," Geist said.

The board of directors decides which of the larger organizations receive major contributions, while an executive committee can approve the smaller donations.

He said LT&T deducts the contributions as allowed from its taxes.

Donkey reported stolen from pasture in Lincoln

A black male donkey apparently has been stolen from a southwest Lincoln pasture, leaving a female donkey minus a companion.

The male, a 9-year-old with white feet, is missing from a field belonging to Wayne A. Roach, 67.

Roach told police the fence surrounding the pasture near Folsom and W. A Sts. was checked, and that there was no place where the donkey could have escaped.

The female donkey was not taken, he said.

Roach told police he heard that a donkey matching the description of his missing one, was offered for sale at Syracuse, but was not sold.

The apparent theft occurred sometime between Sept. 29 and Oct. 2.

Boston power failure blacks out five areas

Boston (UPI) — A power failure blacked out more than three square miles of Boston Wednesday night, sending residents out into the darkened streets with matches and candles.

Police said the Back Bay, Park Square, downtown theatre district, South End and Kenmore Square areas were affected. There were no immediate reports of looting.

Sgt. Albert Dennehey said "three or four square miles" of the city was affected by the blackout.

"People are walking around in the streets with matches and candles," said one Newbury Street resident in the Back Bay.

Police said a manhole explosion was reported on Stuart Street in the theatre district at the time the blackout began.

A spokesman said the explosion was believed to have begun in a "trunk line" that transmits electricity between the South End and Back Bay sections.

Park Square includes the city's "Comb at Zone" — the adult entertainment section — as well as many theaters. The Back Bay area is heavily populated by students and young people.

Inmate work stoppage ends

A work stoppage that initially involved more than 100 inmates at the Nebraska Penal Complex penitentiary Wednesday ended with 11 inmates being placed in the "adjustment center," according to prison officials.

The 11, who were taken by prison guards to the adjustment center at about 4 p.m., will face a disciplinary hearing, according to Correctional Services Director Joe Vitek.

Vitek said the abortive protest apparently grew out of some misinformation from the prison grapevine concerning the search for and seizure of contraband from a prisoner Monday night.

Prison officials searched the prisoner near the visiting room and found $20, considered contraband under prison rules, Vitek said. At that time authorities also "had reason to believe he had drugs on his person," Vitek added, and a rectal search by a prison physician was ordered.

As a result, a bag containing 24 grams of marijuana was discovered, Vitek said.

Misinformation began circulating that the prisoner had been illegally searched and that a guard, not a doctor, had made the search, Vitek said. The search was legal and done under clinically hygenic conditions, he said.

Vitek said 93 prisoners in the east cellblock and 16 in the west cellblock indicated they would participate in a work stoppage when questioned before noon. After noon, the numbers had dwindled to zero in the west block and 11 in the east block, he said.
